DESERONTO.

At his home, corner of Thomas and First streets, on Saturday morning, death came to one of Deseronto's best known and highly respected young men, in the person of Milton C. Wm. J. Gaynor, Mayor of New York city was shot in the head and seriously wounded Tuesday as he stood on the promenade deck of the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse by James J. Gallagher, a discharged and disgruntled city employee. Gallagher was almost instantly overpowered and arrested. The shot was fired at 9.45 o'clock fifteen minutes before the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was due to leave her pier at Hoboken, N.J., and the Mayor was receiving Godspeed from a group of friends preparatory to a vacation trip to Europe. The bullet struck him behind the right ear and ranged downward, inflicting a dangerous though not necessarily fatal wound. Unless blood-poison develops surgeons are hopeful of the Mayor's recovery, although at his age, 59 years, such a wound is essentially grave.

JUNIOR MATRICULATION.

The junior matriculation examinations have been issued. The following list contains the names of three classes of candidates, arranged in three separate groups, A, B and C, under each county.

PASSED IN ELEVEN SUBJECTS.

In group A are given the names of all candidates who have obtained complete junior matriculation by passing on the eleven required examination papers, which are as follows:—English composition, English literature, history (ancient and British Canadian), algebra, geometry, Latin authors, Latin composition, together with the four papers in two of the following subjects: Experimental science (physics and chemistry), French (authors and composition), German (authors and composition), Greek (authors and composition).

In group B are given the names of those who have passed in at least eight of the papers required for complete matriculation. They have, therefore, failed in not more than three of the required papers. The papers in which these candidates have failed will be shown on their certificates. They may complete matriculation by passing in all the remaining papers at one subsequent examination.

In group C are given the names of those who have written upon any number of matriculation papers less than the eleven required for complete matriculation and who have passed on all papers upon which they have written. In this list will be found the names of successful candidates who have written only on those papers required for matriculation into the faculty of applied science or into the Ontario College of Pharmacy.

Normal entrance candidates who were also candidates for matriculation have been considered in the above results. The names of such candidates, if successful in obtaining complete matriculation, are included in group A. Candidates who have failed on Normal entrance papers, but who have passed in the additional matriculation papers taken, are reported in group C.

The certificates of the successful candidates and the statements of marks of them who failed will be sent to the Principals of the high schools and collegiate institutes, or to the public school inspectors, in about a week. Candidates will apply to these officials, not to the department, for the reports in detail.

A British conference on public morals and the means of bettering them has been listening to the views of publishers. Several of these witnesses have alleged that women want immoral books, while other publishers shift the burden to male readers. As women probably read more than men, the success of a so-called immoral book, as of a so-called immoral play, like the success of a moral book or play, probably in the main depends upon the favor of women.

The conference, therefore, did not get to a very serviceable conclusion on this point. But it did illustrate the weakness residing in all such discussions, which inevitably raise the point, What is immoral in books? What would seem highly subversive to one reader would seem enlightened if not platitudeous or axiomatic to another. Who is to judge? For example, Mr. John Murray insisted that books of an immoral or impure tendency do not by any means exhaust the list of noxious literature. He said that books expressing false and perverted views on religion, social questions, and polities do more harm than immoral books as such, because people can be seen reading them without being put to shame and because readers of them can talk about them openly. "The books by Henry George, Karl Marx and Nietzsche and the doctrines they express are doing immense harm in the British empire," declared Mr. Murray. "I class them as noxious literature."

This was from the lips of a descendant of Byron's publisher, one of the chief publishers in the England of to-day. Undoubtedly he read Milton's "Areopagatica" at school and surely ought to know the history of the struggle for a free press. Yet here he is solemnly proposing a ban upon books of philosophic and political theory, and setting up his own little standards of what is good or bad for the British empire. Unfortunately there is too much of this spirit in our own country among people who have not learned that all political and social progress has been won in the teeth of this tendency of the narrow mind to clamp upon thought and conscience the steel bands of its own dogmas.

The late disasters among those who have been attempting thefeat of navigating the air shows that the mechanism so far used is far from being perfect. A few weeks ago when it was stated that a passenger airship was being tried in Germany it was remarked that this might show enterprise on the part of that country but that it was probably

FAIRY TALE WORTH WHILE

Life Is One Long Reaching After and Slowly Attaining the Good Before.

Whoso would learn the art of living must read his lessons from the book of life. Living is simply the business of growing. Growth with all it means not simply of accretion but of awakened powers, developed resources, heightened vision, deepened meanings, mastery, and command is the sign of life. Where no growth is no life is. If you would learn to live you must know how to grow.

No man with one ray of a soul within but would fain achieve the fine, full flowered life, the life of self-controlled developed powers, of sane, keen mind, and clear judgment. We poor little shrubs would all be fair, fine tall palms. If there is no such desire, then we are not even weeds; we are but dust of the desert. But, given the desire, how shall we find the way from our frail, wind-shaken weakness to strength and beauty of character?

We too easily listen to false prophets who tell us that the fairest flower, the finest product of all the gardens of the universe, the rich, true, developed soul, is the one rebel to all the laws of life. If you would develop the mind it must be trained in right growth, the physical powers must obey life's laws, but the crown of all comes not in this way. Character is a sort of a freak.

Even a mushroom must have a night for its growth, a man must have the more because he is the more, but they tell us, may come to the fullness and end of its growth in an instant. It is a philosophy born of sloth and peddled about by those who will not pay the price of the labor and waiting necessary for character to come to its beauty and strength. Consider the lilies; weeds of the field; their fair glory but for a few frail hours, yet even they must grow, must wait, must yield to warm earth and winning sun and nurturing air, must put on their graces not in some pregnant instant, but by the majestic miracle of the steady processes of the divine law that works as truly in the least blade of grass and the finest hope that ever thrilled the souls of men.

It would seem at first thought a delightful possibility that we might at some magic touch be transformed from our old, weak imperfect selves, with our feet so far in the clay and our eyes only just turning to the light, into that which we at our best most desire to be. That would be a fairy tale worth while. The pity is that so many, under that delusion, spend all life waiting to begin to live.

True, there is to us a mysterious beginning. Some time the tiny life deep down in the soil begins to spring up for itself, to have its own life, and to reach out to the beauty that is to be. But that is, after all, but a step in the whole of its life. There was life before. Its own life comes out of larger living. So in us all there is the life latent that marks us as of the divine order. Who shall trace its beginnings? Ours but to see that it be not begun in vain, to die dwarfed, undeveloped. We know that for us all this higher life comes through long struggle, that we put down the base and rise to the better, perhaps in answer to some moment of exultation when the sun of great truth flashes on us, but always by STRUGGLE AFTER STRUGGLE, to-day one victory gained and tomorrow some new strength attained!

We need not be disturbed by the loud boasts of those who declare that all their struggles are over; their perfection is attained. Many have struggled as a weed in the spring time for an instant; their perfection is no more. They flaunt their rank height to-day, but tomorrow's scorching sun or bitter blast lays them low. The tree can afford to wait its time. Some vices grow as weeds, and virtues that flaunt themselves seem to grow as fast. But ours is the larger, longer and nobler task of learning so to live that there shall be roots as deep as the branches are high, that there shall be living contact with the great sources of life so that growth shall be continuous through the days of drought and the seasons of wintry need.

The secret of such living is simply the constant search after and assimilation of all that strengthens and enriches the life. Consider the lilies how they grow, strength is not wasted nor beauty marred by fretting on needless toiling, but they turn over to the sunlight, drink in of the dews and rain, and find in all about them means of greater vigor and loveliness. Growth of character comes not by any startling event but by the steady processes of life and law.

had borne the burden of the day and the scorching heat (12); if, therefore, such benevolence was bestowed upon the one-hour men, what would they not get? This was precisely the spirit of the disciples, voiced in the petty question of Peter (Matt. 19. 27).

HOME.

TASTY RECIPES.

Angel Food Gelatine.—Dissolve, according to direction on box, the contents of three boxes of raspberry jell-o, and set aside to thicken. Make an angel food cake from your favorite recipe. Now take a pan enough larger than the one in which your cake is baked to allow an inch on all sides. When jell-o has become quite firm put it into the pan to the depth of an inch and place cake in it. Fill the space on all sides and top with jell-o and set on ice. Cut in slices and serve with whipped cream. The pink and white is very pretty.

Banana Puree.—Open a can of sliced pineapple, lay one slice on each serving dish, put sound, fully ripe bananas through a ricer, sweeten, and to each cupful of puree add two tablespoonsfuls of orange juice. Pile in a mound on the pineapple and dust with sugar. Garnish with candied cherries.

Tasty Dessert.—A round, loaf-shaped sponge cake with the center scooped out and filled with diced pineapple mixed with whipped cream and seasoned with sugar. Makes a slightly and tasty dessert. Decorate the top with cherries.

Pineapple Sherbet.—Juice of three lemons and one orange, two cups of sugar, one can shredded pineapple, three quarts of water, whites of two well beaten eggs. Freeze same as ice cream.

HOSIERY HINTS.

The length of time hosiery will wear depends largely upon the care given it. Buy a good grade to start with, and when a small hole appears, darn it immediately. When a large one appears in the foot cut away all the thin part adjoining, leaving a round or oval shaped hole with a good firm edge. Take the darning cotton and steel crochet hook and proceed to fill in the hole, working all around the edge with single crochet stitch; then round and round, narrowing fast enough to keep the work flat and finishing firmly at the centre. This is done more rapidly than darning, is very neat, and as strong as before the hole appeared.

And then the children's knees. If darned in short stitches when beginning to wear thin their life is lengthened and it is a good idea to place a thin piece of an old stocking underneath and darn through both. When this will not do any longer cut off the stocking, straight across, in the strong part, just below the worn out knee. Then join the two parts again on the sewing machine with thread to match, but turning the top portion of the stocking upside down, thus bringing the worn part away up out of sight; or perhaps it can be cut off entirely (it depends upon the length), and the top or unworn part down over the knee. The seam inside can be opened and felled down if desired. A little practise will determine just how much or how little to stretch the seam under the machine foot, so that when the stocking is pulled it will appear smooth and the seam hardly noticeable.

being perfect. A few weeks ago when it was stated that a passenger airship was being tried in Germany it was remarked that this might show enterprise on the part of that country, but that it was probably an enterprise that would prove to be costly.

This has been more than demonstrated in the last few weeks. The truth is, that the energies of the inventors of the various kinds of machines used in air navigation should be working more for the perfection of the same than to be putting them to practical and commercial use at the expense of human life. Experiments are necessary, and doubtless lives will be lost while these are going on, but it is almost murder in the present imperfect state of air navigation to even attempt to carry passengers or anything of that kind.

THE NEW SONG

Psalm 40: 1-3.

Saviour, Thy presence we implore
While we with graceful hearts adore
Thy Matchless love supremest;
Thou didst present the sacrifice,
And Thou didst pay the ransom price
Thy people to redeem.

As those who are in bondage led,
We chose the downward path to tread.

While evil reigned within.
In Thee our minds no beauty saw;
The perfect, just, and holy Law
Didst but reveal our sin.

But Thou didst come our souls to seek;
To us Thou didst distinctly speak
To show us we were dead:
And then, our broken hearts to heal,
Thou didst to us Thyself reveal
As dying in our stead.

Thy life to us true life imparts:
Thy Spirit dwells within our hearts:
Our songs to Thee we raise.
In Thee alone we stand complete;
Upon the Rock we set our feet
And Thy great Name we praise.

Lesson VII. The Laborers in the Vineyard. Matt. 20. 1-16.

Golden Text, Matt. 19. 30.

Verse 1. Early in the morning—The laborers hired at this time may represent the apostles, to whom this seems to have been a much needed lesson at this period. They were the first on the field.

2. Had agreed with the laborers—They therefore had no just cause for complaint at the close of the day.

A shilling a day—This was the common wage of the day laborer. The denarius was the official coin of the empire, and was worth about seventeen cents of our money, but with a much greater purchasing power.

3. The third hour—The day was divided into hours, but the night into watches. No mention is ever made of definite hours of the night. This would be at nine o'clock. With those who were standing at this hour idle in the marketplace, no stipulation was made, except that the householder would give what was right (4). God can be depended upon to deal generously with every man. Nothing is said about disqualifications arising from idleness during the three best working hours of the day.

6. The eleventh hour—Even when the day is nearly done, and men have frittered away their time in idleness, the compassionate householder finds some usefulness in them which he can bring into the service of his vineyard.

7. No man hath hired us—They were undoubtedly the poorest type of laborer. But they were certainly better at the beginning of the day than at its close, except, perhaps; they would now be more eager to make up for the time they had lost. They were not to blame for their failure to work in the vineyard. They had haunted the market place hoping for a chance call. Many a man is hurriedly passed by because there seems to be in him little promise of value to the kingdom. But God keeps going out to the places where men are to be found, and every man in time gets his call.

Go ye also—No word is spoken about wages. Men who come in late certainly have very little to expect, according to the mercenary measures of men. They are willing to get a pittance rather than close the day with nothing. He who sends us forth is qualified to judge as to the proper remuneration. And he alone is qualified.

9. They received every man a shilling—The point to keep before us is that the householder was paying for work done in his own vineyard, and was therefore the sole judge of the value of that work to him. He did not consider that those who were pressed in at the last, when time was precious and the work crowded, could with justice be paid less than a full day's wage. It was of no advantage to them that he had his steward begin from the last unto the first (8). This order is necessary to the proper development of the parable. If the first had been paid and sent away, there would have been no occasion for complaining on their part.

10. Supposed that they would receive more—They were figuring on the beneficence of the master. They voiced in the petty question of Peter (Matt. 19. 27).

11. They murmured against the householder—but unfairly. Why should they be jealous of others, so long as they themselves received all that had been agreed upon? Some labor all day whose only motive is to get what is in it for them. They have no particular loyalty to the householder. That these men were thinking mainly of the pay is evident. Some men crowd more loyalty into a fag-end of life than others into a long period of opportunity. It is simply a question of motive.

14. Take up that which is thine—The rewards of the future are not arbitrarily assigned. It is indeed lawful for God to do what he will with his own (15). But it is impossible to think of him as giving to anyone less than that one deserves. When we take account of his mercy it is probable we shall all receive more than we merit. But the manner in which we conduct ourselves during our day of work will bear an inevitable fruitage when even is come (8).

15. It is the mark of a shallow, painfully suspicious disposition to call in question the justice of God. The fact that he is good settles all questions as to his dealings with us, whether they are settled or not according to our estimates of what is right. Our part is not to judge, but to work, and to work for the love of it and of him, to our full limit.

16. This is the moral of the parable, the text from which it is preached. The evident meaning is that in the final distribution of rewards, the first and last are to be treated alike. There will be no distinctions of first and last, such as prevail among men. Not that they are going to change places, but they will all be on an equal footing.

RATHER DIM.

A tourist, concluding a visit to Ireland, was bidding farewell to an attendant.

"Good-bye, Pat!"

"Good-bye, yer 'onor, and may every hair on your head be a candle to light you to glory on the last day."

"Well, Pat," said the tourist, showing a bald pate, "when that day comes there won't be much of a torchlight procession."

And even now one seems to feel
That summer's on the run.

A little practise will determine just how much or how little to stretch the seam under the machine foot, so that when the stocking is pulled it will appear smooth and the seam hardly noticeable. At any rate, stockings treated in this way wear twice as long and a pair which at first looks impossible to the weary mother (with half a dozen such impossible pairs in the weekly mending basket) can be very quickly converted into a pair which will never look unsightly except when off the foot.

"Mothers" do not wear through at the knee and can be repaired by cutting off the worn feet and attaching others, which can be bought at any large dry goods store, or can be made from the legs of another pair of hose. The legs can be utilized in another way: Cut each of two down a few inches—say, eight or nine—set in a diamond shaped piece to give width and finish with bands and side openings into a neat little pair of panties for the wee one. These tuck into the stockings and thus protect the delicate little knees from many bumps and scratches. If made of large (outsize) hosiery no extra piece is set in; but seamed up straight. Fell all seams.

When father's socks are beyond repair in the feet make some nice soft holders of the tops.

CHICKEN.

Chicken Liver and Bacon.—Cleanse and separate chicken livers into four pieces, wrap in a slice of streaky bacon, fastening on one side with a tiny skewer. Roast in a moderate oven till livers are done. Then reinforce skewers and serve around a mound of hot boiled rice which has been lightly salted for a few minutes in bacon.

Chicken Spaghetti.—Boil thoroughly one chicken. Mince meat fine. Boil two 5 cent packages of spaghetti twenty-five minutes in hot chicken broth. Remove the seeds from two cans of tomatoes and the juice of two onions. Put in baking dish. Layer of spaghetti and tomatoes, then layer of chicken, then layer of cheese, until all is used. Bake thirty minutes. Serve hot.

Chicken Fritters.—Cut enough cold chicken into small pieces to make a large cupful. Season with half a teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper. Let the meat stand for an hour in an earthenware dish with the juice of one lemon squeezed over it. Make a batter of one cup of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, two cups of flour and two beaten eggs. Stir the meat into this, then drop a teaspoonful at a time into boiling fat. Fry brown.

WORTH KNOWING.

Parsley eaten with vinegar will remove the unpleasant effects of eating onions.

In order to remove corns a little sweet oil should be rubbed on the corn night and morning, and if persevered with for about a fortnight, the corn ought to disappear.

To prevent hair falling off it is a good plan to wet the head occasionally in salt and water.

Turpentine should be sprayed or sprinkled in the haunts of cockroaches. It will often quite destroy the pests and will always disperse them.

Grained wood should be washed with cold tea, a small surface only at a time, and rubbed well with a flannel cloth before it comes dry.

There should be a separate grater for onions. Do not use a combined grater in circular form with different sized teeth for nutmeg, cheese and cabbage, or you may lament spoiled foods.

In case of sudden croup, heat a little vinegar in a plate, wring out a piece of flannel in it and bind quickly around the throat. The smell and heat seem to penetrate at once.

Carpets can be cleaned and freshened by going over them once a week with a broom dipped in hot water that has a little turpentine in it (proportion a tablespoonful to a quart of hot water).

Never rinse lace in blue water with the idea of improving its color. Real lace should be finally rinsed in clear, soft water, or, better still, in skim milk, which will give it a soft, creamy color.

New boots which sometimes do not take a good polish should be rubbed over with a cut lemon before blacking. A cut raw potato will also serve the purpose, although the lemon is preferable.

FUNERAL COSTUMES.

Their Extravagance Curbed by Law at One Time in England.

Sumpituary mourning laws were formerly found necessary in England to restrict the extravagance of the nobility and their imitators in the matter of funeral costume. At the end of the fifteenth century it was laid down that dukes, marquises and archbishops should be allowed sixteen yards of cloth for their gowns, "sloppes" (mourning cassocks) and mantles; earls fourteen, viscounts twelve, barons eight, knights six and all persons of inferior degree only two. Hoods were forbidden to all except those above the rank of esquire of the king's household.

In the following century Margaret, countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII., issued an ordinance for the "reformation of apparel for great estates of women in time of mournings." So it seems that men and women have met in the extravagance of sorrow.

Even 200 years ago London tradesmen found that court mourning seriously affected their business. Addison relates that at a tavern he often met a man whom he took for an ardent and eccentric royalist. Every time this man looked through the Gazette he exclaimed, "Thank God, all the reigning families of Europe are well." Occasionally he would vary this formula by making reassuring remarks respecting the health of British royalists. After some time Addison discovered that this universal royalist was a colored silk merchant, who never made a bargain without inserting in the agreement: "All this will take place as long as no royal personage dies in the interval."—London Chronicle.

EVADING THE LAW.

The Pictures of Flying Birds in a Mohammedan Mosque.

According to one of the tenets of the Mohammedan religion, it is a sin to make a picture of any living thing. The elaborate decorations of the palaces and mosques of the east are almost exclusively made up of ingeniously interlaced geometric designs, arabesques or flowers, intermixed with sentences of the Koran.

There is a belief among Mussulmans that at the day of judgment Allah will demand that the artist who has made the image of a living thing shall endow that image with life and that, failing to do this, the artist will be sent to perdition for his sin.

A gentleman who visited a mosque in Algiers found that the tiles with which the building is decorated, which are very old and very beautiful, are adorned with flights of birds. He expressed surprise at this and asked if the command against such representation were a modern edict.

"Oh, no," answered the pious Algerian to whom he addressed the question. "These are not pictures of living birds."

"But they are painted as if flying across the tiles," the other said, in some astonishment.

"Yes," the Mussulman replied, "but do you not see that about the neck of each there is a fine black line? That is to show that the artist painted only dead birds, and the command of the Koran is not violated."

DECAY OF TIN.

Remarkable Alteration Which Takes Place in the Metal.

Anything made of tin, it seems, is doomed to a brief existence. This metal is subject to a remarkable kind of alteration, a species of disease to which it is liable. When exposed to the air tin undergoes no chemical change, as do iron and copper, which, of course, chemically combine with the oxygen or with water. The tin, however, still remains metallic tin, but gradually becomes gray and dull and falls to fine powder.

The disease is "catching." It infects or induces the same change in other masses of tin in the immediate neighborhood. We are told that in a Russian imperial magazine, in place of tin uniform buttons, little heaps of powder were found. A consignment of Banks tin sent from Rotterdam to Moscow in 1877 arrived at the latter place in the form of powder. This alteration is due to a change in the internal crystalline structure of the metal and is analogous to the slow transformation of monoclinic sulphur to rhombic sulphur. As a result, objects of tin of archaeological interest are rare. Those that have been found have been in the form of earthenware vessels, knobs, etc., which have been found in the Swiss lake dwellings coated with tin foil. Cassiterite or tinstone is the single ore from which the tin has been obtained in any quantity.—Knowledge and Scientific News, London.

A PLACID MERCHANT.

He Had Some Regard For the Social Side of Trade.

The summer visitor in a small seaport town was amazed and amused at the assortment of merchandise displayed in the little store at the head of the wharf. The showcase was devoted to an assortment of candy at one end and a lot of cigars and tobacco at the other end and no barrier between. Next to the showcase stood a motor engine valued at several hundred dollars.

Thinking to please the proprietor, the visitor remarked that even the large department stores in Boston could not boast of such a collection.

"Well," he said, "I ain't aping them stores, I can tell you. I aim to keep what my folks want. When a man wants an engine for his bo't he wants it, and if the fish are running he can't wait to send way to Portland or Boston for it. He wants it when he does, then and there."

After a little pause he continued: "I don't like the way they do business in them big stores, anyway. Why, when you go into a store up to Boston the first thing you know somebody asks you what you want."

"Now, I never do anything like that. If a man comes into my place I pass the time o' day and ask him to set, and after he's set and talked a while if he wants anything he'll tell me."

"I never pester a man to buy. Maybe he ain't come to buy; maybe he's come to talk."—Youth's Companion.

Nights of Wasteful Debouchery That Wore Him Out.

"Yes, I'm dissipating too much," said the red faced rustic as he rubbed his head despondently.

"Dissipating?" gasped his friend.

"That's the word I used. You've heard that expression about 'burning life's candle at both ends?' Well, that's my case exactly. To tell the truth, I have been having too gay a time. Last night I went down to the Blue Moon and drank a soda. Then some traveling man offered me a cigar.

Fashion Hints.

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPS.

Immense hatpins are still used. Pink linen is extremely fashionable.

The girdle is a pronounced feature of the best gowns.

Fans are so huge that they are most awkward.

All the new neckwear shows the effect of the frill.

The kimono to or below the elbow leads all others in sleeves.

The blue and green combinations of metallic effect are popular.

For afternoon gowns crepe de chine-tussor is occupying the first place.

All the blues are popular up to the faintest Marie Antoinette tint.

Plain colored satin ribbons made into resettes are a fad of the moment.

The most favored fans are of satin and lace with extremely long handles.

Light old rose tints are genuinely girlish colors for millinery purposes.

The new summer stockings are embroidered in vivid colors on instep and ankle.

Foulard veiled with chiffon makes up simple little afternoon or visiting gowns.

The newest shoes are arched for the shortening effect and have a medium vamp.

Girls with gowns to their knees are wearing embroidered stockings in silk and lisle.

Most of the French frocks of midsummer character are short enough to show the instep.

Dotted Swiss is much used this season. It is striking to have the dots done in black.

Embroidered chiffon gowns are made over heavy satin; black over white is especially smart.

The black taffeta silk coats quite covered with silk braid are popular with middle aged women.

Now custom allows any woman to whom the fashion is becoming to bare her neck for every waking hour.

Pierrot collars to supplement the low neck and protect the throat on occasion are in great demand.

Beads are to the fore, wooden, satin, and rubber, strung on metal thread on a gold gauze background.

Lovely scarfs are fashioned from the Persian bordered chiffons and marquisettes, combined with mabrouk.

A new green, dark and deep, goes by the pretty name of "scarabee," and is not unlike the tone of the antique gem.

In embroidered gowns flower designs predominate, but such effects as wheat and corn stalks are seen, and even fruit patterns are not unknown.

Many of the new Dutch collars are of lace, with jabot of double stole attached. One pretty one has the jabot fastened to the square collar by means of large pearl buttons, so that it forms a vest effect.

CASIE IN THE ARMY.

Civilians Find It Difficult to Understand Military Discipline.

One thing not commonly understood among civilians is the completeness of the barrier which divides army officers from the soldiers, or, as they are more generally called, the "men." It is always vastly amusing to those familiar with the service to observe the errors in this respect frequently made by the novelist and the playwright.

Personal qualifications have nothing whatever to do with the matter. A soldier may be a gentleman who has enlisted with the purpose of obtaining a commission, yet there can be between him and his officers no social intercourse of any sort, and severe penalties would be inflicted upon the officer who would attempt to disregard the rule.

It might seem that this enforcement of a caste sense would result in much hard feeling on the side of the men. Such, however, is not actually the case. It is taken for granted and recognized as conducive to "good order and military discipline." It is a military regulation like any other and implies no disgrace. Directly a soldier's enlistment is out or directly he rises from the ranks the prohibition is removed.—Delineator.

The First Universities.

To fix precisely the date of the rise of the first universities is impossible for the reason that they were not founded, but grew. They were started by a few able men who had something they wished to teach and youths wished to learn. Gradually the free, voluntary center of learning became the organized affair we know as the university. Among the earliest of these centers of learning were Salerno, Naples and Bologna, Italy being the first land to experience the literary revival. We may say that Salerno university was fairly established by the year 1060, the University of Bologna by 1160 and the University of Naples by the year 1200. The University of Paris, which owes its existence to the genius of Abelard, was founded about the same time.—New York American.

Handed It Back.

A clergyman in the neighborhood of Nottingham was complimenting a tailor in his parish on repairs which he had done for him. In the course of conversation he, however, incautiously observed: "When I want a good coat I go to London. They make them there." Before leaving the shop he inquired, "By the bye, do you attend my church?"

"No," was the reply. "When I want to hear a good sermon I go to London. They make them there."—London Tit-Bits.

Tea in the Time of Buddha.

At the time of Buddha China was enjoying a large foreign commerce in tea. It was carried by her junks to Japan, Korea, Tonquin, Anam, Cochin, Burma, Siam, India, Ceylon, Persia and Arabia. According to one record, it was sent to a great black river country west of Arabia, from which it was separated by a long and very torrid sea, which must have been Egypt. It was carried by caravans to Manchuria, Mongolia, Kuldja, Tartary, Tibet, Persia and northern India.

"You don't mean it?"

"I mean just what I say. Then I bought a ham sandwich. I ate it and actually forgot myself and took another. On my way home I dropped into the church social for a few minutes. Some of the young ladies made me try the 'penny dip,' and I drew a blank."

"Such extravagance!"

"That's exactly it. Extravagance and dissipation will kill me. It was 9 o'clock before I reached home."

"Nine o'clock?"

"Yes, I must be sowing my wild oats. Well, I've finished now. Night before last I called on my girl. She wouldn't let me leave until I had taken her out and bought chocolate creams. Talk about pleasure hunting! I'm simply worn out after these nights of wasteful debauchery."—Pearson's Weekly.

BLINDING A SHARK.

A Pearl Diver's Ruse by Which He Made Good His Escape.

A successful diver must possess great courage and nerves of steel. Such a man connected with a large wrecking company was visiting some years ago the pearl fisheries in the gulf of California, where sharks abounded. On one of his trips in quest of the pearl oyster he had a narrow escape from a fearful death.

He had been instructed never to stir from the bottom until he had looked up and around. Fortunately he heeded the advice. Having filled his bag, he glanced quickly about and caught sight of a huge shovel nosed shark watching him.

In an emergency men think fast. Near the diver was a large rock. He moved quickly to the other side of it, hoping to dodge the ferocious monster, but the maneuver did not work. The shark watched every movement, changing his position by a slight motion of his powerful tail.

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape. He worked for dear life and had the water thick with mud in less than half a minute.

Slipping around the rock again, he rose to the surface, having barely strength enough to reach the side of the boat, and was hauled on board just as the voracious man eater made a rush for him.

Romeo Not Taken Seriously.

Juliet was only fifteen years old, but she thought she was quite grown up. One evening, says Mrs. R. A. Pryor in "My Day," she was receiving on the moonlit veranda a young man caller. He, too, it seemed, considered himself grown up. The anxious youth was moved to seize the propitious hour and declare himself. Juliet wished to answer correctly and dismiss him without wounding him.

She assured him animus would never consent.

A voice from within—they were sitting beneath her mother's window—settled the matter:

"Accept the young man, Juliet, if you want to. I've not the least objection. And let him run along home now. Be sure to bolt the door when you come in."

Evidently the mother had small respect for boy lovers and wished to go to sleep.

Roosters, pheasants, peacocks, and other birds are made up in gold and silver, or with a plating of precious metal, for the chantecler jewelry. The birds are usually soldered to such ornaments as brooches, pendants, buckles, scarf pins, veil and hat pins, purses, and mesh bags and other articles.

SOME IMMUNITIES.

"It must be irksome," said the visitor to the penal institution, "to remain here and be designated merely by a number."

"Yes," replied the once affluent inmate. "A number is an annoyance. But you don't have to carry a horn and a lot of lanterns."

WORTHY OF IT.

"Our cashier," said the vice president of the bank, "says he wants to take a vacation six months hence."

"That's all right," replied the president. "As long as the cashier is willing to give us notice we should be glad to let him have a vacation."

Perhaps that chap who advertised that he was dead in order to bring his wife home to him knew she had always been able to raise Cain, and might be induced to come back to do the same for him.

It seems quite fit and proper, doesn't it, that an aeronaut should be highly satisfied with a successful flight?

CLIMBING HIGHER.

And now flour has gone up again. This will make bread rise.

SPENDING THEIR TIME, TOO.

Even though talk is cheap, many people do so much of it that it seems like rank extravagance.

If a woman can't drive her husband, she at least can make him back up.

HER LAD

Inside the barely furnished garret darkness had come again. All that day the frail little old woman had lain fever-stricken and helpless on the bed. Like a sick, uncomplaining animal she had crept to her corner the night before, since when no living creature had been near her. The ways of the other dwellers in the tenement were not as hers. It was understood amongst them that she was "not quite the thriftest," and they had learned to take her goings and comings unconcernedly.

Somewhat, despite all vicissitudes, she had contrived to find the weekly sum demanded for the rent; but the tiny grate had seldom served its purpose, the darkness of the nights had rarely been dispelled by light, and of food the cupboard was often quite bare. In all the teeming building, no creature was poorer than this grey-haired old woman, with the smooth face of a young girl and the simple mind of a child.

Not one of the kindly hearted people whom she visited in regular turn could have said where she lived. Some had known her for many years; that she was miserably poor was but too evident. For that reason, a meal was generally assured her, and at intervals, on the pretext of a service rendered, a little money.

There were refractory children who, perchance, must submit to her tuition at the piano; on occasion she would be requested to rattle off the mazurkas and polkas she had learned as a girl; or, maybe, to mind the house and bairns while the parents went to theatre or concert.

The good folk on her visiting-list had learned to know her ways. They were aware of the obsession that held her, and would listen with kindly interest when she talked, as she often did, of the lad who was comin' back.

For thirty-five years the little woman had been expecting the return of the man who had won her love in the glad springtime of her life. The wedding-day had been fixed; in her keeping he had deposited a little pile of banknotes—savings from his salary—towards the furniture. Her friends understood from her babbling that "money always burned a hole in Tom's pocket." And then something—she knew not what—had occurred in his life to drive him suddenly abroad. He had left her with the promise on his lips that he would return.

Hot on the shock of his going had happened the tragedy which had unhinged her mind. In one night she had been bereft of home and parents by the awful catastrophe of fire. Out of the entire household, the alone had been saved. In the hospital they had discovered a letter clutched tightly in her hands—the charge given by the lover who would return. The memory of that horror had still power to cause a fit of shuddering. The sight of a fire-engine from the day of her return to consciousness moved her to faint terror. The intervening years

"Tom never could keep money," his fellows said of him.

Still sad and despairing he sat, gazing blankly before him. Ruin, and worse, stared him in the face, and he could find no escape. Amongst all his friends there was no man who could help him, even had he dared to ask. In the morning the auditor would insist on the production of the sheet, and he could expect no mercy.

He rated himself for a blind fool. Self-recrimination held him, clutching his hands. The future had promised bright for him. There wa' a certain lovable girl, whose heart was in his keeping, and who believed in him. The thought of her grief at his disgrace added to the poignancy of his torment.

His boyish recollections were of a worthless father, who had died a felon in Sing Sing, and of a mother whose heart had broken. For that reason, he seldom spoke of America; because of it he had taken another name.

The memory of his father held him in bitter musing. He knew that he had fled from England, as a young man, to escape the consequences of some peculation.

"Like father, like son," he muttered; while all the time he denied the reproach by the plea that he had meant to repay—that, given time now, he would right the wrong. There seemed no way out. He must face the music. And yet—the thought set him trembling—was there, after all, no hope? Someone there had been in the old days who had known his father well, who even now inquired his whereabouts. He had often seen the advertisement, but, with no wish to rake up the past, had refrained from communicating. What if the inquirer, for old times' sake, would extend a helping hand to the son?

"A forlorn hope!" he muttered, with hands pressed to his head. "But I'll try it—I must!"

* * * * *

The genial policeman standing at the corner of Cheese Street regarded the anxious-faced young man with a queer grin.

"Dook's Buildings?" he said. "Yes. Up the gullet, half-way down. Lookin' for trouble?"

Tom turned away with a shake of the head. The hopelessness of his mission had become strengthened at sight of the mean street. Help such as he needed could not be expected from any luckless individual compelled to live in this squalid area. At discovery of the darksome approach to the buildings he stood wavering, and only curiosity impelled him to enter it.

The blotchy-faced woman, of whom he made inquiry for Miss or Mrs. Jane Joy, could give no information, and referred the question to another of her kind who chanced to appear.

"You'll find no Joy dahn 'ere, gov'nor! Nah if it was sorrier—"

"My oath!" the first agreed, with a laugh.

"P'rhaps it's the duchess 'e's lookin' for!" the other remarked. "Wot's 'er name, Mrs. Shogg?"

"Nah you've arsked me!" that lady returned. "'Er it is, or nobody. Top floor, when she's at 'ome. Mind the 'ole on the second laundin'!"

Up the dingy flights of stairs Tom climbed, to stay outside the door of the garret, with hand arrested in the act of knocking, as the sound of labored breathing, cut at inter-

THE KING'S HOUSEHOLD

DUTIES OF MEN HE HAS APPOINTED TO OFFICE.

Many are Experienced Courtiers and Friends of His Present Majesty.

Many of the offices in the household of the King of England are political appointments which change with the Government. But the Master of the Household, the Grooms in Waiting, the Equerries in Waiting, the Keeper of the Privy Purse, the private secretaries, etc., are appointed by the sovereign, says the Gentlewoman.

King George chooses also his permanent Lord in Waiting, which post he has bestowed on Lord Anney. His Majesty has appointed as Keeper of the Privy Purse Sir William Carington. He is brother to Lord Carrington, but elects to spell his name in a different manner; and his marriage in 1871 is worthy of note as being one of the first of the now long line of Anglo-American alliances.

Lord Knollys and Sir Arthur Bigge are to be joint private secretaries. Lord Knollys has for forty years been the faithful friend and trusted counsellor of royalty and his deep affection for King Edward is a fact that will never be forgotten. His sister, Miss Charlotte Knollys, has been in attendance on Queen Alexandra since 1863, and it will be remembered that his parents, Sir William and Lady Knollys, were about the court of Queen Victoria.

LATE DUKE OF CLARENCE.

This recalls to mind a funny story. Old folks are aware that the birth of the late Duke of Clarence was somewhat premature. His baby clothes were not ready and the small but precious arrival was wrapped in cotton wool which had been taken off Lady Knollys's last new bonnet from Paris. It may not be generally known that it was through the Knollys family that close relations were established between royalty and the Rothschilds.

Sir Arthur Bigge has for years been a special friend of his present Majesty. He is an experienced courtier and acted as groom in waiting to Queen Victoria as long ago as 1880. He is clever and tactful but somewhat silent, and King George was once heard to say that one of Sir Arthur's good qualities was that he preferred thinking to talking.

His Majesty has reappointed four of the grooms in waiting who were in the service of his late Majesty, and Edward Wallington, who was in his former household. The new appointments are those of Col. William Lambton, a brother of Lord Durham and a distinguished soldier, and Capt. Seymour Fortescue a brother of Lord Fortescue and a naval officer who acted as equerry to the late King Edward.

As regards equerries King George has retained in his service the four who were in his household as Prince of Wales. And the new appointments are those of Col. Charles Legge, Col. Frederick Ponsonby, and Major Wigram.

are always in attendance. Their term of office varies from about a fortnight to a month, according to royal convenience. No one but a peer can hold this office. The captain of the honorable corps of gentlemen in arms is sworn into the post by the Lord Chamberlain. At present the duties of this corps are limited to attendance at courts and levees. The captain of the yeoman of the guard is at the head of a corps which was raised by Henry VII. and which still wears the dress of that period. The yeomen of the guard are on duty at the palace on all state occasions.

THE ORDER OF MERIT.

Two Distinguished Men Appointed to It by the King.

A recent issue of The London Gazette announces that the King had been pleased to appoint Sir William Crookes, F.R.S., and Mr. Thomas Hardy to the Order of Merit.

The Order, which was instituted in June, 1902, has now been conferred on twenty-three distinguished people. The membership is of two kinds—military and civil—and includes Lord Morley, Lord Rayleigh, Lord Lister, Mr. James Bryce, Miss Florence Nightingale, two famous Japanese Field Marshals, Prince Yamagata and Prince Oyama, and Admiral Togo, and Lord Roberts, Lord Wolseley, Lord Kitchener, and Admiral Sir John Fisher.

To the Order have now been added another distinguished scientist and a great novelist. Sir William Crookes, chemist, metallurgist, and expert in electrical engineering, is a Londoner, and was born in 1832. In 1861 he discovered a new metallic element which he called thallium, and in the following year the first piece of this new metal was shown at the great exhibition. Following this came his discovery of the wonderful little instrument known as the radio-meter, the story of its birth being one of the romances of chemistry. He is also the inventor of the Crookes tube, which was employed by Professor Rontgen for the discovery of X-rays; and is responsible for the discovery of the sodium amalgamation process of separating gold and silver from their respective ores.

Mr. Thomas Hardy, Britain's greatest living novelist, celebrated his seventieth birthday last month, when he was the recipient of worldwide congratulations. Mr. Hardy began his career as an ecclesiastical artist, and he drew and measured many of the lovely old Dorset churches which have since figured in his novels. A copy of one of his earliest books, "Under the Greenwood Tree," happened to be picked up by Mr. Frederick Greenwood, the editor of The Cornhill, in a second-hand bookshop. The accident of seeing his own name in the title led him to buy the book, and his reading it led him to order "Far From the Madding Crowd" for The Cornhill.

the charge given by the lover who would return. The memory of that horror had still power to cause a fit of shuddering. The sight of a fire-engine from the day of her return to consciousness moved her to faint terror. The intervening years had marked a gradual descent to penury.

Physically and mentally, she was unequal to the fight. She had endeavored bravely to gain a livelihood by giving lessons; but there came a day when she was supplanted by a more efficient teacher, and, possibly, offered charity. That day marked the end of her visits. The pride within her—mistaken, maybe—forbade the taking of what she had not earned. Through the darkest days she had never begged. Even when poverty had driven her to the slums, she comforted herself with the belief that what she received was for services rendered; and the good friends, who had learned to know her, generally contrived to make some trivial obligation.

Every morning she had wakened to the certainty that to-day Tom would come back. Each night she had fallen asleep with the belief that to-morrow surely her lad would return.

In her mind's eye, she pictured him as when he had left her—a clean-built, handsome fellow of laughing eyes and ready tongue. Imagination had stopped at his coming. She only knew that thenceforward life would be glad.

For some days she had felt ill, but, despite the aching body, she had dragged herself out on the round. How she reached home on the previous night she could scarcely remember. Leaden-limbed and pain-racked, she had stumbled to her bed, hopeful that the morrow would see her better. Sleeplessly, she had heard the tolling of every passing hour the long night through. All day she had lain helpless and unattended, while the consuming fever drove her ever nearer to delirium. And now night had come again.

The little woman was very near the Valley of the Shadow.

The office, save for a solitary figure, was deserted. The usual closing hour had long passed, but, on the pretense of clearing up back work, Tom Robinson, the cashier, had remained. Still and white-faced, he sat at his desk, trying to see a way to avert exposure and its consequences. The plea of arrears was an invention. His books should have been handed to the auditor that day; but, on the excuse of a missing voucher, he had withheld them. On the morrow it would be necessary to produce the paper, and he dare not do it. The misappropriation, applied by him in a certain cut to fortune, with the usual result, was a happening of two months back, and week by week since he had manipulated the accounts, hoping before the financial year-end to be in a position to produce the balance disclosed. Forty-five pounds still remained, and he saw no way of raising it.

His service with the firm dated from his youth. He had come with excellent credentials, and, by marked ability, had reached his present position of trust. In appearance, he was clean-built and handsome; in disposition he was sunny and freehanded to a fault.

body. Top floor, when she's at home. Mind the 'ole on the second landin'!"

Up the dingy flights of stairs Tom climbed, to stay outside the door of the garret, with hand arrested in the act of knocking, as the sound of labored breathing, cut at intervals by a feeble moan, came to him. Then, very quietly, he knocked and listened. He was conscious that for a spell the moaning had ceased, but, receiving no response, he turned the handle. The little room was dimly illuminated by a shaft of moonlight which penetrated the dingy skylight.

"Tom!" The hoarse, long-drawn whisper came to him, holding him inert. Hat in hand, he stood just within the doorway, staring in amazement. "Tom!" The whisper had taken the ring of exultation.

On the disordered bed the woman looked up at him with ineffable gladness in her shining eyes, and vainly she tried to lift her wasted arms towards him. In the form and features of the son she saw again the lover who had promised to return. He had come, as she knew he would!

Something, if not all, of the story was revealed to the lad as he stood staring. Something of the dread presence was already in the little room, and, feeling it, all thought of his present trouble fled, leaving him filled with tender sympathy. In the long ago this grey-haired, hollow-eyed woman had been a trusting, lovable girl, who had known and loved his worthless father.

Very quietly the approached the bed, and knelt beside it.

"Tom!" came the broken whisper. "My lad—come back—at last!"

"You knew I should some day?" he muttered smilingly.

"Some day," she whispered. "I've kept what you gave for our little home all the years. Under the pillow—Tom, my lad! Come at last!"

Gladness urged her to exert her waning strength in an effort to twine her arms about him. One moment she was smiling, the next a spasm contracted her face, and, with a little sigh, she fell back heavily. When at last he rose he knew that she had fallen asleep forever.

Gently he groped beneath the pillow. His fingers closed on an envelope. He drew it forth, and read the faded inscription: "Tom Branksome, my dear lad." For quite a long time he remained with the packet in his hands. Then, with trembling fingers, he broke the seal, and with the contents revealed, he stood crying like a child.

The letter contained the sum of sixty pounds—a dozen five-pound notes—faithfully held in trust, despite all privation, for this glad day—held as a sacred charge for thirty-five years.

By the door Tom stayed and looked back. The dead face was smiling.—London Answers.

As regards equerries King George has retained in his service the four who were in his household as Prince of Wales. And the few appointments are those of Col. Charles Legge, Col. Frederick Ponsonby, and Major Wigram.

THE PONSONBYS

are a family who have been much about the court and Col. Fritz held the same post in the late household of our late sovereign. Col. Charles Legge is only brother of Lord Dartmouth and acted in the same capacity at the court of King Edward VII.

Now we will take a look* at the great offices in the royal household that are political appointments and which do not change at the accession of a new sovereign. The post of lord steward, now held by Lord Beauchamp, is one of the most important. In his hands are placed the whole direction of the royal household below stairs, and he has authority over all servants in the royal establishment. The official designation of the office over which he presides is the board of green cloth, and he carries the staff of his office at high ceremonials and at last may have the sad duty of breaking it over the grave of his sovereign.

The treasurer of the household ranks next to the lord steward in that department. He also carries a white wand of office, and at a coronation it is his privilege to distribute the medals which are struck in commemoration. W. Dudley Ward, a nephew of Lord Esher, is at present treasurer of the household. The comptroller of the household stands next, and he too has a white staff, and his chief duty is to examine all the accounts which come under the lord steward's department. This post is now held by Lord Liverpool.

THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN

comes next to the lord steward in household precedence. All invitations to court are sent out in the lord chamberlain's name by command of the sovereign. In state processions he walks backwards in front of his Majesty, with the lord steward, and at a court or levee it is his duty to stand next to the King and read out the name of each one who approaches the royal presence. The vice-chamberlain, the lords in waiting, the mistress of the robes and the ladies of the household are in this department. Lord Althrop now holds the important post of lord chamberlain.

The master of the horse is the third great officer of the royal household. He has entire control of the royal stables, and all the King's horses and carriages are under his supervision. He arranges every detail of state processions, and on such occasions his place is in the sovereign's carriage unless the seat is occupied by some member of the royal family. Also the whole staff of equerries is under his control and he arranges their "waits" in the desired order.

The master of the horse has the sole right of any one at court to have one of the royal carriages and pair of horses always at his disposal, and two of the royal footmen are always on duty for his special convenience. This high office is now held by Lord Granard.

The lords in waiting are seven in number and two at least of these

"Though I have served forty years in the army, and have seen every nation and every army in the world worth looking at, I have never seen in any part of the world, at any time or place, women so broken down, so hopeless as I have seen them in this district. Yet we talk about heathen races and savage countries, and call this God's England!"

This outburst was made by Surgeon-General Evatt a short time ago during a speech at the opening of the extension of Claremont Mission Hall, Cannonbury, England.

"I am no person," he continued. "I speak in the name of science. Motherhood is everything. The woman is supremely sacred. I see women everywhere drinking in your pub houses. I never saw it in any land as in England, and I have been all over the world. Where is the dignity of motherhood? The day will come when no woman will be supplied with drink. Trained to Regard all Not in Uniform as Enemies.

As an additional protection to the Hull (Eng.) docks, a scheme has just been formulated by which the police constables of the North Eastern Railway on night duty will be assisted by dogs.

It is the Airedale breed that is employed, and the experiment has been attended with so much success that large kennels have been provided and it is now proposed to augment the number of animals. Tramps scarcely ever sleep out-on the docks now, but hold the dogs in deadly terror.

Each dog undergoes a most elaborate training which centres wholly around one idea, that every person dressed in other than police uniform is an enemy. This is an important point, and no person dressed in plain clothes is allowed to touch or pet the dogs.

The policemen who tend them must only enter the kennels in uniform. The dogs are taught to obey a policeman's whistle, which they soon learn, for the Airedale terrier is obedient. Each animal undergoes strict and rigid training, and, so far, the dogs have rendered most valuable service.

BRITISH PRISON FARE.

The British Home Office has issued instructions to prison governors respecting the treatment of prisoners sentenced without hard labor, who in future will be allowed to wear their own clothes, need not bathe or have their hair cut, and may have their own food and their own books, with more frequent visitors.

they are to a large extent spied from the point of view of their commanding officers.

As soldiers they are unwilling, and inclined to maintain a sort of passive resistance against the authority of their superior officers. Whether in the case of a domestic revolution such soldiers would ever fire on a rebellious crowd of citizens is a question which most competent judges answer in the negative.

HARD TO COMBAT.

It is alleged that the Socialist party encourages its adherents to remain in the army voluntarily after they have completed their compulsory term of two years' service, in order that they may become non-commissioned officers, and thereby enable the Socialist leaders to keep a grip on the Kaiser's legions.

It is perfectly clear that nothing can be done to put an end to this propaganda under the existing law, so that if, as the Minister of War declares, energetic measures are to be taken to suppress it, a new Act must first be created to render such steps legal and possible. Such a law would be exceptional coercive legislation directed against a political movement, and Germany would hardly tolerate a reactionary policy on these lines in its present mood of demonstrative discontent revealed in the remarkable Socialist victories at by-elections to the Reichstag.

A ROYAL PHOTOGRAPH.

How One of Queen Alexandra was Produced.

An ingenious method by which up-to-date photographs may be secured was alleged in the Chancery Division in London (England) during the recent hearing of a motion in the action Lafayette v. the Rotary Photographic Company.

An injunction was asked for to restrain the Rotary Company infringing the plaintiff's copyright in a photograph of the Queen-mother, and to give the names of those to whom the photograph had been sold.

For the plaintiff Mr. A. Grant, K.C., alleged that the defendants induced a lady to sit, dressed in incognito, for a photograph. Then, he said, they cut out her face and substituted that of the Queen-mother, the copyright of which was the plaintiff's. His wish was, if possible, to get the photograph off the markets.

Mr. Walter, K.C., contended the plaintiff had no right to restrain the defendants, but he undertook to withdraw the photograph, and so that understanding the motion was allowed to stand over.

"Now, boiled bacon is the staple meat of the countryside, and there is only one flesh food that is better for the skin—namely, roast pork, with not too much lean."

"In addition to the beneficial action which pork has on the digestive system itself, it also affects the skin more directly, for it aids in the deposition of a sufficient supply of oily matter in that organ."

"Skin deficient in oil is harsh and dry, and to remedy this cosmetics have to be employed. Pork acts as a natural cosmetic."

BLOW BUBBLES FOR HEALTH.

Children's Pet Amusement a Benefit to Lungs.

The bubble-blowing cure was first prescribed by a London doctor who saw a little boy engaged in this fascinating pastime at the conclusion of his evening bath.

Struck by the highly beneficial way in which the child inhaled and exhaled his breath, the doctor recommended the treatment to other patients, amongst them a clerk whose lungs were not as healthy as might be. In every case the result was extremely beneficial.

"Teaching a child to breathe deeply and steadily is very important," said a well-known lung specialist to the press in England last week, "and if the child is made to do this while blowing bubbles, undoubtedly the lungs will be strengthened and made healthier."

"Let the child stand in a free, upright attitude, draw in its breath deeply and steadily through its nostrils, and then attempt to blow as big a bubble as possible."

"Be sure that the lungs are always filled to their utmost capacity for it is the deep inspiration that is so beneficial."

"But the inhalation should always be deep—don't let them draw in the air quickly and jerkily."

"The plan of mixing a little glycerine with the soap-water is a good one, for thereby the bubbles will be stronger and will last longer, giving the child time to rest and watch them."

SERIO-COMIC BURGLAR.

Could Not Keep Mum About His Amusing Adventure.

An ancient burglar story is revived by a correspondent of the London Daily News. A young girl had gone up to bed, and on lighting her candle saw in the looking glass a man in a corner of the room where he believed himself hidden from observation.

With great presence of mind she pretended to be unconscious of his presence, and to emphasize this attitude lifted her arms in front of the mirror, saying aloud, "What beautiful arms I've got!"

A minute or two after she quietly left the room, and during her absence the burglar thought it well to make his escape.

Some time after she was in a crowd, and a man whispered, "What beautiful arms I've got!" She raised a cry, and the man was arrested, confessing later that the impulse of exposing the girl's supposed vanity had been irresistible; particularly as he continued to believe he had escaped her notice on the occasion of his intended burglary.

their younger brothers will follow suit.

For the time being the King and Queen will stay at Frogmore when the Court is in residence at Windsor, but the princes will have full access to the castle grounds, as the two residences are very near each other. Their Majesties have always been generous supporters of the local institutions, and they have made a practice of dealing with local traders as far as possible.

As their Majesties have no country residence apart from Frogmore, it is expected that King George will make Windsor Castle more of a private residence, especially as it is in such close touch with London.

ONE OF EUROPE'S BEST.

All things considered, Windsor Castle is probably one of the best royal residences in Europe, 48 rooms, comprising the spacious kitchen, pantry, confectionery, vegetable, and other store rooms, 79 bedrooms, 65 sitting rooms, and rooms containing 231 beds for servants.

The length of passages is about 1,700 yards. The private apartments include Queen's boudoir, the private audience chamber, the oak room, the tapestry room, the white, green, and crimson drawing rooms, the state dining room, the armory and the gold pantry, which contains a collection of gold plate valued at £1,800,000.

KILLIECRANKIE PASS.

The Famous Scottish Battlefield Has Been Sold.

Faskally House and the estate of 5,827 acres, including the Pass of Killiecrankie, have been sold by private auction.

It was through the Pass of Killiecrankie that nearly 1,000 Atholl men marched to join the Earl of Mar in the rising of 1715, and Prince Charles Edward Stuart made his way from the Castle of Blair to Dunkeld through the pass in September of 1745 before he made his campaign.

General Mackay led his forces through the pass in 1689, when he fought the battle of Killiecrankie.

The property belonged to Mr. Archibald Butter, C.M.G., and the purchaser is Major Frederick C. Foster, D.L., J.P., of Queensbury, Yorkshire. Faskally House is beautifully situated at the south entrance to the pass, and the fishing in the Rivers Garry and Tummel is some of the best in this part of Scotland.

SWIFTEST SHIP AFLOAT.

Is a Destroyer Launched Recently in England.

The fastest ship in the world is the destroyer Swift, launched recently at Portsmouth, England. This ship, which is of 1,800 tons displacement, has a speed exceeding 35 knots an hour. Her fires are fed by petroleum. The turbines give 20,000 horsepower divided among four screws.

The English Admiralty had already realized 34 knots in the destroyers Cobra and Viper. One of these excessive long boats broke in two upon a wave not long after she was launched.

The maximum speed of the French torpedo boats averages about 31 knots.

In urging the Bermondsey Borough Council to take steps to secure the regulation of places at which bread is sold, the Bermondsey and Rotherhithe Association of Master Bakers states that in many cases bread is sold in the same shop as soap, candles, coke, coal, and paraffin oil, and that it is occasionally exposed in egg-boxes on the pavement.

"While rule in India depends on many things, such as sympathy, kindness and conciliation, and a degree of courage and strength," said Lord Curzon at the dinner of the Indian Civil Service Dinner Club, "it depends in a higher degree on England's continued possession in that country of a capable, contented, and efficient Civil Service."

TOLD BY YOUR EYE.

Doctors Can Diagnose Disease by Marks On Patient's Eyes.

By looking a man in the eye, you can often tell whether he is "crooked" or not. By looking you in the eye, your doctor can tell a good deal about your physical condition.

In an address before the International Electro-Homoeopathy Congress at Caxton Hall, London, Dr. W. Anderschon, of Norway, described how the new system of disease diagnosis by the eye was discovered by Professor Peozely, of Poland.

In capturing an owl as a boy, Professor Peozley broke its right leg, and he noticed that a black line at once appeared in its right eye, which faded away as the fracture healed.

Many years later he became a professor of medicine and by studying the eyes of hundreds of patients formed the theory of diagnosis of disease by lines on the iris.

GIANTS IN THE LAND.

Englishmen Who Carry Weight all the Time.

If it be admitted that England is not just now producing intellectual giants, still the day of brawn and beef is not over in the old country. Some very big men have lately been brought into prominence.

In Brierley Hill, Staffs., there is a giant named Geo. Lovatt, who stands over six feet in height and weighs 476 pounds. Living in the Harrow road, London, there is Mr. W. T. Ecclestone, better known as "Jolly Jumbo," who, although under 5 feet 10 inches, weighs 462.

Mr. J. Walker, of Leeds, who makes Relish, also weighs 462 pounds. Constable Wolfe, of the Dublin police, weighs 420 pounds, and stands 6 feet 6 inches in his stockings. Many other giants have been brought to light.

Big Heads and Large Minds.

Big men have larger heads than small men as a rule—not because their mental grasp is wider or stronger, but because their bodies are larger. And therefore the proportion of the head to the whole organism must be taken into account. Again, a larger head may inclose a comparatively small brain, and a thick skull by no means indicates intellectual force. Still further, a small brain may have a very fine quality of organism, and a larger brain may be very imperfectly organized. Taking all these factors into account, we cannot always be sure that the man wearing the biggest hat is the possessor of the biggest brain.

or the boxer revolution and the siege of the legations in 1900. Prince Chun is, therefore, the only man who ever wielded imperial power in China who has traveled abroad.

The Stationer.

"Stationery" has etymologically as much to do with standing as has "stationary." The original stationers, or stationarii, were so called because they sold their books upon stalls or "stations"—in London round about old St. Paul's Cathedral, in some cases against the walls of the cathedral itself. This is one of many trades the names of which have no direct allusion to the commodities sold. "Grosers," for instance, were so called either because they sold "en gros," wholesale, or because they were "engrossers," monopolizers.—London Chronicle.

Candied Flowers.

Rosebuds boiled in sugar and made into a preserve are eaten by Arabians, while in China candied rosebuds and jasmine flowers are equally popular. The common yellow lily that grows in marshes and ponds is utilized by the Turks as the main ingredient of an agreeable conserve. Candied violets are very common in France, while in Roumania and Bulgaria many flowers are used for flavoring.

Strategy.

The conductor put his head through the doorway.

"Can't you move up to the front a little?" he pathetically inquired.

"Impossible!" a clear voice called back. "There's a fat man wedged in the aisle."

Whereupon a hasty move up the aisle ensued, and the situation was promptly relieved.

Motives.

"Brother Titewadd is the stingiest member this church ever had."

"How can you say so? Didn't he give you that beautiful memorial window?"

"He did. And why? So he could be gazing at it with a benevolent and rapt expression when we are passing the contribution plate."

Expurgating It.

"Elfrieda, what did your father say when he heard that I had been here calling on you?"

"He said you were a numskull, a mollycoddle and a jesterhead."

"Is that all?"

"That's all, Guy—except the adjectives."—Chicago Tribune.

Truthful.

"I thought you said the water wasn't over my head," spluttered the new pup who couldn't swim when he had been pulled out of the ten foot tank.

"It wasn't over your head when you asked me," replied the smart attendant.

Scriptural Misquotations.

"He who runs may read" sounds very Scriptural, but it is in reality a mangled version of the verse in the prophet Habakkuk, "Write the vision and make it plain upon the table that he may run that readeth it." Another Biblical misquotation is "By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou earn thy bread," the real text in Genesis being "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." And when we pour "oil on the troubled waters" thousands search the Scriptures in vain for the metaphor.—London Chronicle.

Natural Pottery.

Excellent natural pottery is manufactured by nature in the case of a certain cactus. Woodpeckers are apt to excavate nests in the trunk and branches, and in order that it may protect itself again these incursions the plant exudes a sticky juice, which hardens, forming a woody lining to the hole made by the birds. Eventually the cactus dies and withers, but the wooden bowl remains.

A Miraculous Escape.

A motor car with several passengers went over a cutting in Manawatu George, near Wellington, N.Z., and raced down a steep bank, carrying trees and shrubs with it. Strange to say the car remained upright, and stopped in the river bed 70 feet below. The occupants were unhurt.

SOME NORMAN RELICS

THE NORMAN UNDERCROFT IS NOW OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

Repository of Many Famous Historic Remains Is the Only Surviving Part of Westminster Built by Edward the Confessor—Fragments of the Old Cloister Are Being Put Together—Effigies of Monarchs.

The Norman Undercroft, which adjoins the ancient Chapel of the Pyx at Westminster, London, has been opened to the public for the first time for many years.

The Undercroft is a range of five vaulted bays, which, by the removal of partitions, has been made into one long chamber. It is situated at the south end of the Chapel of the Pyx, and the dividing wall, apparently, has been pierced at some time by two bays, the outlines of which are visible. Overhead is the old dormitory of the monks, part of which is now Westminster School. These buildings are of great antiquarian interest, because they are practically all that remains of the building of Edward the Confessor. For many years past the Undercroft has been mainly a receptacle for lumber, and its architectural beauties have been hidden by the masses of old stone and other material with which it has been littered. One of its Solomon, is in an excellent state of preservation. Among the other architectural fragments is one which is supposed to have been one of the bases of the old Chapel of St. Catherine. The carved wooden Jacobean pulpit of the Abbey is also preserved in the Undercroft. Most interesting of all, however, are several of the old wooden effigies of kings and queens of England, which it was the custom at royal burials to carry upon the coffin. These images are of older date than some of the wax effigies which have been preserved at the Abbey. Those of Edward III., Elizabeth of York, Henry VII., Catherine of Valois, and Anne of Denmark are fairly complete, says The London Times, but the figure of James I. is without the head, and that of Henry Prince of Wales is simply a bare trunk without vestige of clothing. Some of the figures are carved out of large blocks of wood without joints; others consist of separate limbs fitted together. That of James I. is partly clothed in what is supposed to have been its original costume. There is also to be seen a portion of the hollow wooden skull of Anne of Bohemia.

The Limit.

Mr. Cribbs—Mrs. C., I have borne with resignation—nay, even cheerfulness—antique chairs that wobbled, antique clocks that were always thirteen hours behind time, antique rugs that some prehistoric Turks wove, antique china, antique bowls, pans and kettle. All this I have smiled at, but when you give me antique eggs for breakfast I draw the line, madam; I draw the line.

Palmistry.

Palmistry in its modern acceptation is divided into two branches—chiromancy and chiromancy. Chiromancy defines the outward shape of the hand and of its members, the thumb and finger. Chiromancy is also derived from the Greek and signifies divination by the hand—that is, by the lines, mounts and other marks on the palms of the hand.

Be Ridiculous Than Beautiful.

A question ever interesting to women is "What were you thinking about when you stood at the altar and the minister married you to the man of your choice?" Clara Morris says that after much investigating she has proved to her satisfaction that blissful thoughts are far, far in the minority. "One dear lady said," relates Miss Morris, "My dear, all my beautiful thoughts at the church were simply drowned in oil. Oh, yes, I really mean it! I was tremendously in love; I was pretty and happy and had meant to send up one final prayer to heaven of loving gratitude at the moment I was left by my bridegroom's side."

"But, coming up the aisle on my uncle's arm, my attention was first challenged by the discovery that I apparently had no feet. I could not feel them and my sole support seemed to come from uncle's arm. I literally tore my mind from this phenomenon by saying to myself, "He is waiting for me. In a moment more we will be authorized to walk together all our lives long. O, God is very good and—." I was before the dear old bishop. I saw the book open; my lips trembled to the first word of prayer—when my eye fell upon a large, freshly made oil stain on the crimson carpet covering the pulpit steps.

"Now, who did that? I thought indignantly. That's like a man to fill a lamp here on the steps instead of doing his work in a proper place. My beloved held my hand, but my mind clung to the oil stain and I wondered, "Why do they use oil lamps in the pulpit when there's gas in the body of the church; and why had not the careless creature got some brown paper and a hot iron and—a dead silence—portentous—awful came upon the church. My lover's hand was crushing mine to pain."

"I tore my eyes away from the oil stain to meet the bishop's amazed ones. He bowed his head remindingly—I bowed my head and stupidly gasped, "Yes-s-er. Yes!" And I was Harry's wife and had been married with my whole mind intent upon an oil stain on the pulpit stairs. Harry says the first kisses he snatched from his bride's cheeks on the way home were salty ones! She paused a moment, then: "Heavens!" she sighed. "How I do loathe lamp oil!"

umber, and its architectural beauties have been hidden by the masses of old stone and other material with which it has been littered. One of its three entrances has been used by the boys of Westminster School as a short cut from the cloisters to their gymnasium.

As the result of the careful and judicious restoration by the Dean and Chapter the Undercroft is now a rectangular chamber of considerable proportions; it is about 110 feet long and 45 feet wide. It is three or four times as large as the Undercroft beneath the Chapter House. The four pillars which divide the Undercroft into five bays are situated in a line in the centre of the chamber. In two of them much of the original stonework of Edward the Confessor's buildings is visible. The second pillar from the north end presents a curious appearance. On one side it slopes inward and downward from the capital, forming a recess which might be used for a small altar or an image. The pillar has now been buttressed. One of the bays and part of another contain the original vaulting. The eleventh century carving of the capitals of some of the pillars remains—not altogether intact, but sufficiently complete to enable a clear idea to be formed of its characteristics. The use which was made of the Undercroft in mediaeval times is not known. It is possible, perhaps, that it was used as a school for the novices.

Some relics which have been found in various parts of the Abbey have been collected in the Undercroft. Among the stones which were brought to light while the floor of the Undercroft was being reconstructed are a number of fragments which are believed to have formed part of the Norman arched of the original cloisters. These fragments have been fitted together at the south end of the chamber as a tentative reconstruction of three arches of the old arcade. The three bosses are elaborately carved, and one of them, which depicts scenes from the Judgment of

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Saves Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and pay for them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee.

All dealers, 25c per package, or $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

THE "THIRD DEGREE"

Ethics of the Process as Defined by Inspector Byrnes.

"The 'third degree,'" said Inspector Byrnes, the former chief of detectives, "should be a psychic rather than a physical process. It is not remorse brought about by continual thought upon the heinousness of his crime that drives a guilty man to confession. It is the nervous strain involved in a long effort to maintain his pretense of innocence, while he is in constant fear that the police are in possession of evidence that may prove his guilt. Something like a parallel case would be that of a prizefighter who should surmise that his antagonist was playing with him in the ring while capable of sending in a knockout blow at any time he felt so inclined. Apprehension that he was dealing with conditions of the nature of which he was unaware would eventually weaken the man in that case. Tell a suspected man who is guilty that you have evidence of his guilt and that he will get nothing to eat or will not be permitted to sleep until he confesses, and unless he is a particularly stupid fellow he will know that you have no proof against him and are only trying to get it. For instance, show him ostentatiously the weapon with which he may have killed a man and tell him that you know all about the crime and he would better confess it. He will say to himself, 'They haven't got sufficient evidence to convict me and are trying to make me furnish it, for if they had the evidence they wouldn't care whether I confessed or not,' and thus he will be encouraged to hold out. Also, if he does confess under duress, he makes a false confession, which he knows it will be impossible to corroborate.

"Now, a guilty man in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is not sure that he has covered every trace of his crime, and he may readily be put into the state of mind of the man in Poe's story of 'The Tell-tale Heart,' wherein he can't help believing that proof of his guilt has been discovered and that his cross examiners are mocking him by pretending not to be aware of it. Let the guilty man catch sight of an implement with which his crime is associated in the possession of the police, which he believes has been unintentionally left where he sees it, and it throws him into a panic, because he does not know how they came by the weapon nor what else they may have discovered demonstrating his guilt in getting hold of it. Perhaps he has concocted a story in his mind which the discovery of this weapon renders implausible, and he mentally puts together and rejects one sequence of lies after another, wondering whether it is safe to take chances on this bit of information or that being not in the possession of the police. Then he is overwhelmed every few moments by the thought that everything is known and all his efforts are useless. The guilty man in this condition is no longer normal, and his collapse is only a matter of time." — Frank Marshall White in Harper's Weekly.

He Had Reformed.

A young man who was an enthusiastic lover of nature went to the sea-side for a holiday and, approaching a typical fisherman, said:

"Ah, my friend, how well you must know the face of nature and know it in its many moods! Have you ever seen the sun sinking in such a glare of glory that it swallows up the horizon with fire? Have you not seen the mist gliding down the shrinking hillside like a specter?"

TWAIN'S FIRST LECTURE.

Bret Harte Headed the Claque, but the Audience Swamped Them.

Mr. Clemens prepared a lecture for his San Francisco audience, giving a most extravagant account of what he had seen among the south sea islands. When Bret Harte and some other of his friends were told of his platform intention they agreed to go in a body to the old Mechanics' hall, where Twain was to deliver himself, and form a big claque that would insure the success of the affair.

Mark wrote his own handbill, which set the town agog with anticipation. One particularly inviting phrase printed at the bottom of the announcement was, "The trouble will begin at 8 p.m."

The hall was crowded, and the claque was uproarious when Clemens appeared upon the platform. The lecture was delivered with manifest effort in a slow, deliberate, drawing manner, and the lecturer paid no heed whatever to the inconsiderate demands of "Faster, faster! We can't stay here all night!" and other urgent calls.

Although Harte tried to steer the claqueurs, they insisted upon applauding and laughing in the wrong places, which may or may not have been intended as a joke on Twain, but at last the audience, which began to catch on to the unique style of the man and to appreciate his quaintly whimsical utterances, overwhelmed the claque and had things its own way.

An old timer who attended the lecture says of the effect of Twain upon his first audience: "His slow, drawn-out, the anxious and perturbed expression of his visage, the apparently painful effort with which he framed his sentences and, above all, the surprise that spread over his face when the audience roared with delight or rapturously applauded the finer passages were unlike anything of the kind they had ever known. The lecture was a great success." — Bailey Millard in Hampton's Magazine.

GATHERING PRUNES.

The Fruit is Never Picked, but is Allowed to Fall to the Ground.

A peculiarity of prunes is that they are never picked from the trees, but are allowed to fall to the ground. The reason is that a prune must be dead ripe, with all its sugar developed, or it will not cure properly. Therefore the ground under the trees is carefully prepared and leveled to make a soft, smooth bed for the falling fruit. Gathering the fallen prunes is a staple industry in August and September. Boys and girls and often entire families are employed in it, camping in the orchards.

Being gathered, the prunes are rolled down troughs full of tiny needles that prick their skins. They are then dipped in a hot solution containing lye, which cleanses them, and rinsed in cold water. Next they are put in broad, shallow wooden trays and laid in the sun for two or three weeks. This sun drying practically converts them into the staple prunes of commerce and of boarding house jokes. At the packing house they are assorted as to size by a machine which shakes them over a huge sieve. The farther the prune travels over the sieve the larger the holes, and when it comes to a hole a little bigger than itself it drops through into the proper bin. It is then run through a vat containing hot water and finally rolls down a chute into a wooden packing box—the same box that you see at the grocer's. When the prunes pour from the chute, however, there is a removable frame about three inches back

MARBLE MISERY.

Our Modern Hotels Denounced by a Disgusted Traveler.

Modern hotels, with all their gilt and glitter, are too rich in adornment and altogether lacking in that old-fashioned hospitality which makes weary travelers feel somewhat at home. This is no new idea, by any means, but the evidence is becoming so plain that here and there a disgusted traveler may be heard giving vent to his overwrought feelings in a burst of denunciation. They want the kind of hotel where "life is not all marble slabs and gilt bellboys" and where a guest may turn completely around or put on his hat without disgorging a tip.

There is no doubt that a large section of the hotel public is sated with the splendors of marble halls, which provide spaciousness without comfort. They are tired of a "style" which makes a barren return for the exactions on their purses and indifferent to a table which the most skillful art of the chef cannot prevent from surfeiting. Hotel guests under the modern demands of a system of predatory charges of which tipping is only a minor feature, no longer "take mine ease in mine inn." They are prisoners of luxury, slaves to an artificial scale of living.

Perhaps in time the people who build and run hotels will get wise to this feeling on the part of many patrons and try returning to something like "ye olde inn" to hold their trade. But suppose this is done? Will a generation of gumps who have been educated to accept the present tinsel and tip refrigerators without protest feel at home in anything else? Those who, by example, have been taught to believe nothing worth while unless they pay seven prices for it and hand the eighth to the ever-expectant waiter might be as miserable in a hotel of the olden kind as many others are now in the celebrated hostleries of today, with all their luxuries and their lonesomeness.

Famous Women as Vegetarians.

The Countess of Warwick is one of the latest converts to a vegetarian diet. One is inclined to believe that her ladyship has renounced flesh food in order to preserve the superb lines of her figure. Lady Warwick was getting very stout before she adopted a vegetarian diet. Since then her surplus fat has melted away.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt renounced flesh food for the reason that she found a vegetarian diet was conducive to a more youthful appearance. She now eats nothing but uncooked foods. Vegetables are grated raw and made into delicious combinations of salads for her. She eats raw peanuts and uncooked cereals and avoids wines and all other alcoholic beverages.

Among other well known women vegetarians are the Czarina of Russia, Princess George of Greece, Cleo de Merode, Marie Corelli and Mme. Macerlinck.

A 20TH CENTURY TRIUMPH.

Bleriot May Not Have Been the First Man to Fly the Channel.

Bleriot may have been the first to fly the channel, but we have very excellent reason to question it. The archives of the city of Bergamo, in northern Italy, contain a letter written in London, October 18, 1751, telling of an Italian named Grimaldo, who seems to have been an 18th century aviator. A translation of the letter follows:

"There is here a man of the most surprising talent that ever was seen in the world. He says he is an Italian monk, a native of Civitavecchia, named Andrea Grimaldo, and he is about 50 years old. He spent 20 years in traveling in eastern lands, where he devoted himself for a period of 14 years to constructing the most marvelous machine that high mechanics and mathematics could devise.

"This is a box of the most curious workmanship and build, which, by means of certain clock springs, rises in the air with such lightness and rapidity of force that in its flight it can make a voyage of seven leagues in an hour. It is made on the model of a bird. The wings have a spread of 22 feet from tip to tip. The body is made of pieces of cane connected with parchment and feathers. The wings are of catgut and whalebone. In the body of the machine are 30 wheels with two balls of brass and little chains, which alternately wind up a weight, and with the help of six brass vessels filled with mercury, which run in channels, the machine is maintained in the desired equilibrium.

"By means of the friction of a steel wheel and a heavy piece of londstone, the whole is kept in very regular motion, which lasts during an even and gentle wind, because the machine know the face of nature and know it in its many moods! Have you ever seen the sun sinking in such a glare of glory that it swallows up the horizon with fire? Have you not seen the mist gliding down the shrinking hillside like a specter?"

And, very excited and throwing out his arms, he continued:

"Have you never seen, my man, the moon struggling to shake off the rugged, rugged storm cloud?"

The fisherman replied, "No, sir; I have not since I signed the pledge."—Pearson's Weekly.

bin. It is then run through a vat containing hot water and finally rolls down a chute into a wooden packing box—the same box that you see at the grocer's. When the prunes pour from the chute, however, there is a removable frame about three inches high on top of the box. Box and frame go under a press, which promptly stamps down the contents so that they are no higher than the top of the box. The frame is lifted off, the cover is nailed on the box, and the prunes are ready to ship.

Her Husband Was Not In.

"Husband in?" asked the gas collector cheerfully.

"No," answered the woman; "he isn't at home."

"Expecting him soon?" asked the collector.

"Well," the woman replied thoughtfully, "I don't know exactly. I've been looking for him seventeen years, and he hasn't turned up yet. You travel about a good deal, and if you see a man who looks as though he'd make a pretty good husband tell him I'm still awaiting and send him along."

Breaking It Gently.

Simpkins always was soft-hearted, and when it devolved upon him to break the news gently of Jones' drowning to the bereaved Mrs. Jones it cost him much paper, ink and perspiration before he sent the following:

"Dear Mrs. Jones—Your husband cannot come home to-day because his bathing suit was washed away.

"P.S.—Poor Jones was inside the suit."

Imperishable.

"Do you think it a wise thing to send a boy away to college, Binks?" asked Rippletton.

"Oh, yes," replied Binks. "Teaches him independence."

"But doesn't he get out of ouch with home influences?" persisted Rippletton.

"Not altogether," said Binks. "He gets away from the home influences, but the 'touch' goes on forever."

Probably True.

A raw Irishman shipped as one of the crew on a revenue cruiser. His turn at the wheel came round, and after a somewhat eccentric session in the pilothouse he found himself the butt of no little humor below.

"Begorrah," he growled at last, "and ye needn't talk. I bet I done more sterlin' in ten minutes 'n ye done in yer howl watch!"

The Outlook.

"You were very cold last evening," phoned the young man to the girl he had called on. Then he added anxiously, "What's the outlook for to-night?"

"Fair and warmer to-night," came the answer promptly.

A Little Ambiguous.

The Ingrahams were entertaining two friends at dinner. After Mr. Ingram had helped them to roast beef he happened to glance at the other end of the table, where his wife sat, and observed, to his horror, that the sugar bowl was the old one, with both handles broken off, that usually graced the dining table on wash days.

In vain he endeavored by mysterious nods and winks to direct Mrs. Ingram's attention to it. She either did not see or would not see the mutilated piece of queensware, and his patience gave way at last.

"Cornelia," he said, with some sharpness, "do you think we ought to use a sugar bowl when we have company without ears on?"—Youth's Companion.

Suspicious.

"Let me show you 'Love Letters of Wise Men,'" said the clerk in the book emporium.

"Are they signed?" asked the cautious bookworm.

"Yes, indeed, every one of them."

"Then they must be forgeries. Wise men never sign their names to love letters."—Chicago News.

which run in channels, the machine is maintained in the desired equilibrium.

"By means of the friction of a steel wheel and a heavy piece of leadstone, the whole is kept in very regular motion, which lasts during an even and gentle wind, because the machine cannot fly either in a total calm or in a high wind.

"This prodigious machine is steered by a tail, seven hands wide, which is attached to the knees and ankles of an operator, and by stretching or drawing in his legs to the right or left he moves the machine in whichever direction he pleases.

"But he cannot remain in the air more than three hours and a break in the mechanism would cause a fatal fall. Therefore he does not soar more than the height of a tree or two; so also he has only once ventured over the sea, and this was from Dover to Calais, and the same morning he arrived in London."

Aeroplanists will notice some similarity between the one described and our 1910 constructions, except that the motive power does not seem to bear out even like ideas. It is likely that Grimaldo made some short flights, but it will be difficult to get any one to day to believe he flew from France to England.

A Bath a Year.

The bath, it is said, is the measure of civilization. He who bathes once a day must be a better human being than he who bathes once a week, once a month or, like the Mexican Indians, once a year. There is a belief among these people that to bathe is to court sickness and death. There was a sick boy in a hut where a friend of mine stopped one day, and my friend suggested to the father that a bath might cure him. The father held up his hands in horror.

"A bath! That would kill him!" he exclaimed. "I never bathed in my life, and my children never bathed and never will."

Down in the Low Countries, however, they do bathe once a year.

Wild Zebras.

The zebra when wild is a ferocious animal, and an unwary hunter is likely to suffer from its teeth and hoofs. The author of "Kloof and Karroo" says that a Boer in Cape Colony had once forced a zebra to the brink of a precipice, when the desperate creature turned upon him, attacked him with its teeth and actually tore one of his feet from the leg. Another author writes of a soldier who mounted a half-domesticated zebra. The creature, after making the most furious attempts to get rid of its rider, plunged over a steep bank into the river and threw the soldier as it emerged. While the may lay half stunned upon the ground the zebra quietly walked up to him and bit off one of his ears.

The Bed in Sickness.

Few people realize that for most diseases the bed, and it alone, is the greatest, surest, quickest cure the world and ages of science have yet discovered or bestowed. People as a rule look upon going to bed for sickness as a necessary and unavoidable consequence of sickness instead of looking upon it, as they should, as being the very first and greatest part of the cure of the case.

Visible Stars.

According to the best astronomers, the number of stars that can be seen by a person of average eyesight is about 7,000. The number visible through the telescope has been estimated to be between 75,000,000 and 80,000,000.

Flexible.

In the lobby of the British House of Commons a certain political figure was being discussed. "Ah," said a member, "he's got no backbone."

"Yes, he has," answered John Burns, the Labor member of the Cabinet, "but it's made of tripe."

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope, but I did not want to undergo an operation. I tried several specialists, but soon found that all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look for an all doctor as little better than rogues. One day my doctor asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my trouble. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got the New METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

Dumas' Onion Soup.
Onion soup is often liked by people who disdain the savory herb in any other form. There is no doubt of the wholesomeness of the onion, and those who have never tried the soup are recommended to use this celebrated recipe of the elder Dumas. Take, for three pints of soup, four Bermuda onions or eight common white ones, mince them and fry to a golden brown in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Pour in two quarts of water, season with pepper and salt and boil until the onions are quite soft. Beat the yolks of three eggs, mix with the soup and pour the mixture over finger slices of toasted bread. Milk may be used instead of water in this soup.

Greatest Battles of History.
Burke in his letter on "Natural Society" says that Syria destroyed 300,000 men in each of three battles, one being at Cheronea. The Persians are said to have lost 230,000 men at Plataea. II. Chronicles xiii, 17, records 500,000 slain on one side, which, however, may not have been in a single battle. I Kings xx, 26, tells of 100,000 men being killed on one side in a single day.

Another obsolete British fleet has been sold as scrap iron for a trifling fraction of what the vessels cost. Money put into warships is "spent" in the real sense of the term. If the ships are not sunk by an enemy they soon rust out and are outclassed by more powerful ones. The money put into them does not reproduce itself. Economically it is wasted, absolutely. But while the nations of the world are governed by the present spirit of avarice it is necessary to waste it. If incendiaries are abroad it is necessary to have one's house insured, even though the cost be heavy.

ONTARIO'S BEST DAIRY FARMERS.

The six farmers who have won the highest places in the Prize Dairy Farms Competition that has been in progress throughout Canada during the past two years, under the management of Farm and Dairy of Peterboro, assisted by the Dairymen's Associations of Ontario and the Dairy Cattle Breeder's Association, will be announced with details of their scores, in this week's issue of Farm and Dairy. The first prize has been won by R. A. Penhale, St. Thomas, Ont. (Elgin County) with 777 points. The next five farmers and their total scores are : 2nd J. W. Richardson, Caledonia, Ont. (Haldimand County) 765 points; 3rd E. Terrill, Wooler, Ont. (Northumberland County) 752 points; 4th O. D. Bales, Lansing, Ont. (York County) 750 points; 5th D. Duncan, Don, Ont. (York County) 742 points; and Victor Begg, Moose Creek, Ont. (Stormont County) 736 points.

The judges were Mr. Simpson Renie, of Toronto, whose farm won the gold medal in the competitions held some years ago, and Mr. W. F. Stephen of Huntingdon, Quebec. The contest was an exacting one. One thousand points were offered, including 150 for the house, 150 for the buildings, 200 for the live stock, 200 for the crops, 150 for methods of farm improvement, 75 for machinery and 75 for permanent improvements. About fifty farms located in all parts of Ontario were entered in the contest last year, when the province was divided into four districts and prizes were offered for the best farms in each district. The contest this year was restricted to the prize winning farms in each of the four districts last year.

The competition just concluded, has been so successful that the management has decided to hold another similar contest starting next year, open to all dairy farmers throughout Ontario. The principal prize winners in the present competition will not be allowed to take part in the next contest. As we have many fine farms in this county some of our farmers should enter their farms. Particulars may be obtained from the secretary, H. R.

Emphasizing a Fact.

There are peculiarities, idiosyncrasies of expression, which emphasize and accentuate facts. It is not enough to say "he is deaf." We invariably add "as a post." It would appear sufficient to say "he is blind," but we prefer in nearly all cases to admit of no contradiction by announcing that he is "stone blind." To be "dead" should suffice. "Dead as a doornail" clinches the fact.

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP.

OR, THE HERITAGE OF MADAME YALTA.

"It is over," she murmured. "The wretch has poisoned me."

And she fell. They all rushed to her relief. Their cares were unavailing. Her beautiful eyes opened no more. She was dead.

A month passed since the catastrophe which closed so gloomily this strange history. Alice and Robert are not yet married. They wear mourning for the noble woman who reunited them. But their marriage is arranged, and is to take place in May.

The death of the countess has never been avenged, and it is probable never will be, for Villagos disappeared the day of the crime, and all trace of him was lost. He had fled to some land frequented by the rascals whose chief he was,—bandits who prepare their crimes in darkness, plotting for concealment by the criminal toleration of governments.

The Nihilists abuse what is most sacred. They dishonor the right of asylum.

It was not Maxime's fault if the infamous doctor was not punished as he deserved. He pursued him without losing a minute, but the cowardly knave had taken his precautions in advance, and was not to be found. It was known that poison had been mixed by him in a glass of water prepared for the countess, who foresaw, doubtless, her approaching end, for the evening before she had written her will.

She had forgotten no one who had served her faithfully or who had loved her.

Madame Piriac, Georget, Kardiki, Justine and her husband inherited large sums, to be deducted before the succession of Robert de Carnoel, who was made universal legatee. And Madame Yalta left Maxime Dorgeres a bracelet and a ring, more precious to him than all the riches of the world; it was all that remained to him of a woman slightly known, but passionately loved.

The countess passed into his life like a meteor which blazes for an instant and disappears, leaving a luminous track in the firmament.

The memory of this extinguished star will never be effaced from the heart of Maxime, who is not yet consoled, and who, to recover from so violent a shock, is projecting a voyage round the world.

Perhaps in some far-off country he will meet Jules Vignory, expiating, by a life of toil, a moment of shameful weakness.

Robert de Carnoel only accepted the heritage of Madame Yalta to bestow it upon the poor. The Avenue de Friedland house is for sale, and the proceeds of the sale are to be devoted to a hospital for those disabled by accident. The workman mutilated in a factory will owe an asylum to the woman of the severed hand.

The servants and allies of the countess have all left Paris. Justine has gone with her husband to Algeria; Kardiki has taken refuge in Constantinople, and gives fencing lessons to the subjects of the Sultan; Georget has entered a ship-boy's school, and Madame Piriac is established at Brest.

But Galopardin has remained. M. Dorgeres has taken him for cashier and the safe is well guarded.

THE END.

THE CONTROL OF DISEASE.

It is well sometimes to pause and take bearings with regard to the problems of health and sickness. With the many wonderful discoveries, the serums, the immunities and the improved knowledge of hygiene, what is the situation to-day? ONLY A DANDELION.

"O Charlie! How could you do that? My one flower!"

"I didn't mean any harm, aunty. Anyway, 'twas only a dandelion. And the boy went whistling on his way to school, switching off the heads of the dandelions by the wayside with a stick he had in his hand.

Aunty Jones wiped away a tear and began to pick up a stitch which she had dropped in a stocking she was knitting. She had an accident when she was a little girl, and was so lame that she never walked farther than from her room to the kitchen. She tknitted, sewed and did mending for her living, sitting all the time at the front window of her room in her nephew's farmhouse. She had been watching the dandelion whose head Charlie had switched off ever since it came up, for it happened to be the only one in the little patch of grass between the house and the road, and she loved it. And now, just as it was coming into flower, it was gone, and although the sun was shining brightly, she felt as if a heavy cloud was over her.

At the opening of the school that morning the teacher read the passage in the Bible containing the Golden Rule, and said a few words as to how it should be obeyed in the smallest things.

"You mustn't do anything," she said, "if you can help it, to make any one else unhappy. If you ever do anything to anybody that you wouldn't like to have them do to you, why, make it up to them somehow, and right off."

The children always liked these little talks of their teacher, because they were so simple. When she stopped, Charlie said to himself, "I wonder if teacher saw me switch off Aunty Jones's dandelion, and so talked as she did?"

When school was over, he set out for home with the other boys and girls, but had not gone far when the sight of a dandelion brought back to his mind the thoughtless act of the morning and the teacher's talk. Then, all of a sudden, it came over him that he might dig up a dandelion and plant it in the place of the one he had killed. So he stopped and began to loosen the earth round a particularly fine one which was just going to blossom.

"What are you doing, Charlie?" said one of the boys, for they all had stopped and were watching him. When he told them, several said, "I'll dig one, too!" and they looked round for nice ones.

"Look here, boys," cried out Nellie Upson, "why wouldn't it be a good idea to make a little bed in front of Aunty Jones's window (everybody called her aunty, you see), and plant some garden flowers in it? I've got some pansies I'll bring."

"I've got some lilies and golden-glow," said Emma Jackson.

"I've got some sweet-william," said Frank Brown.

That afternoon a merry band of boys and girls were hard at work making a little bed in aunty's grass patch, and when they had finished were surprised to see how

LIFE A NIGHTMARE

Helpless and Broken Down, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Came to the Rescue.

There are many who think anaemia is a trouble confined to growing girls and women, but this is not the case. Thousands of men are anaemic, and attribute their growing weakness to mental or physical overwork, or worry, and who do not appear to realize that they are swiftly passing into that condition known as general debility, and that their trouble is due entirely to the fact that their blood is watery and impure. If the trouble is not taken in time, they pass from one stage to another until the breakdown is complete, and often until a cure is beyond hope. To men in all walks of life there is no medicine so valuable as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

If you feel jaded, weak or worn out these Pills will make that rich, red blood that puts vim and energy into every portion of the body. Making good blood is the mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and good blood is the one secret of good health and vigorous life. An excellent case in point is that of Mr. R. W. Ellis, of Balcarres, Sask., who says: "Just four years ago I was in England making preparations to fulfil the long cherished ambition of coming to Canada. My health at that time was normal, though I was never very strong. Three weeks before the time of my departure I was overcome with a feeling of general weakness and faintness which rendered me so inert and lifeless that my days were shrouded in gloom. Consultation with a doctor brought me no consolation. Debility was my trouble and I was on the point of a breakdown. 'Canada in your condition means death,' said the doctor. 'You must have a complete rest.' A rest, however, was out of the question, a fortnight's holiday I had and then back to earn my daily bread. The next years were a series of misery and despair, body and brain undermined with a complaint the doctor could only call debility, but apparently could not cure. Snatching holidays when I could I struggled on until the opening of 1909, when completely prostrated I was compelled to go to my parents and become a burden to them. My life was simply an existence and friends said, behind my back, 'consumption.'

"In April, 1909, I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Three months later, on July 1st, I sailed from Liverpool on the Tunisian for Montreal, full of new life, energy and hope. In this great country I am making good and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In three months they changed me from a nervous wreck to a healthy man. When doctors failed they succeeded, and I honestly believe they saved my life."

You can procure this great health-giving medicine from any dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DANGEROUS.

Nurse—"Doctor, the patient rallied a little last night, and shows unexpected strength this morning.

With the many wonderful discoveries, the serums, the immunities and the improved knowledge of hygiene, what is the situation to-day? There are plenty of statistics which, although they cannot lie, do not always tell the truth. It is known that, although many diseases are wiped out, and many others doomed to extinction at a near day, there are other disorders ominous on the increase.

Typhoid fever, one of the most dreaded of physical ills, is now positively known to be due to polluted drinking water, or milk, or other food, or to be spread from house to house through the agency of the fly, and its days are numbered.

Yellow fever and malaria are no longer regarded as visitations of the will of Heaven, but are recognized as due to the visitations of mosquitoes; and it is not really necessary to have those mosquitoes, although it may take some time and hard work to get rid of them.

Diphtheria still rears its head, but it is no longer formidable, since the antitoxin for it has been found.

Tuberculosis is still all too common, and the destruction of it will mean toil and care for humanity for years to come, but the work is well under way. The great start was made when this dread disease was moved by common scientific consent from the "fatal" to the "curable" class.

When this has once been done in regard to any human ill, it is then for humanity to take care of itself.

Those nations that are willing to spend the most money and take the most pains to wipe out disease are coming out first in the race. Great cities have learned the lesson that it pays them to take care of the health of their populations. It is much too expensive to permit unnecessary sickness. Clean water pays, clean streets pay, decent housing for the poor pays.

The boards of health are doing much in these directions and in many others, and as time goes on they will do more. As people are educated in these matters they will be willing and able to give more and wiser co-operation. It is safe to prophesy that the day is coming when people will refuse to put up with preventable nuisances, and when the house-fly, the mosquito and the rat will be extinct; and when, if people want to know anything about tuberculosis, they will have to read about it in books.

With the perfecting of airships, our castles in the air may be used as summer homes.

Turbans are flat and broad. Heavy embroidery is used on linens.

Whole petticoats of ribbon threaded net are charming for party wear.

Burlap suiting is one of the fashionable new fabrics of the season.

The veiled effect of both embroidery and lace is pretty and unique.

Much lace and even malines is seen on some of the latest silk petticoats.

Tiny bows of narrow black velvet ribbon adorn many of the blouses of lingerie.

The newest belts are of Persian cloth, with patent leather buckles and trimming.

Square veils, with embroidered borders, are much in vogue and are becoming.

Persian scarfs are most effective bordered with marahou or ostrich feathers or with bands of plain colored silk.

A morning blouse of any white material may be set off by a yoke and cuffs of the new mustard shade, or of blue and should be worn with a belt of the same shade.

Attractive waists for summer are made of eyelet embroidery or of white linen embroidered in brown dots. Belts, ties, and stockings should match the color of the dots.

Evening gowns are simple. They show the influence of the peasant style. Instead of being on splendid lines with gorgeous ornamentation they are unusually simple.

An effective Leghorn hat has a crown of yellow roses and a cluster of the same flowers under the left brim.

Exquisite are many of the Dresden flower striped muslin. Some of the blouses of this material are trimmed with frills of sheer white muslin—bordered by tiny colored blinds.

One of the striking features of the summer coat is its lining. Of soft foulard in some of the most attractive designs, it generally contributes to a striking whole. White serge is still in high favor; oyster gray and tan linen are delightfully heavy in the new basket weaves, while woolen materials are loose enough to afford comfort without an overburdening warmth. The summer coat is ornamented with a marine collar or with long revers that cross and button quite down. Metal and tortoiseshell buttons are used on the summer coat and huge pockets are not lacking. Keep in mind these points when planning this very necessary article in your summer outfit.

Enchastrisse is the new material of the moment, and the latest addition to the long list of soft satins launched during the last three or four years. It is as pliable as muslin, yet as firm as chiffon velvet. Mme Megard in Paris wears a complete gown of this fascinating tissue at a reception gown in the second act, in a shade known as antique blue. Silk embroidery in a raised bold pattern borders the pointed tunic, and the sleeves, and appears again upon the wide box plait at the back. The guimpe and undersleeves are in cream spotted tulle outlined with a suspicion of black velvet. A line of the same velvet completes the waistband just beneath the bust, finishing in front with a petticoat and a dull silver buckle.

"I've got some blues and golden glow," said Emma Jackson.

"I've got some sweet-william," said Frank Brown.

That afternoon a merry band of boys and girls were hard at work making a little bed in aunty's grass patch, and when they had finished they were surprised to see how pretty it was. But brighter than the flowers which were in it was Aunty Jones's face when she bade them good-bye. The children felt repaid when they saw her happiness.

But my story does not end here. The little flower-bed made the farm-house look nicer, and everybody noticed it. The children had had such a good time making the bed that they jumped at the teacher's suggestion that they should make beds like it in each other's front yards where there were none. And now there is not a prettier village street than that in Brookdale, for every yard has its nicely cared for flower-bed, where a little while ago there were only grass and weeds; and all that made this wonderful change was only a dandelion.—Youth's Companion.

What Consolidation Represents

The Canada Machinery Company, Limited, was incorporated under the Canadian Companies Act on July 5th, 1910, and has acquired the business and undertakings of the following companies:

1. MacGregor, Gourlay and Co., Limited, Galt, Ont.

2. John Ballantine and Co., Limited, Preston, Ont.

3. Hespeler Machinery Co., Limited, Hespeler, Ont.

And the Woodworking Machinery Departments of:

1. Goldie and McCulloch Co., Limited, Galt, Ont.

2. Sussex Manufacturing Co., Limited, Sussex, N.B.

The companies controlled constitute practically all the concerns in Canada manufacturing the lighter grades of woodworking machinery and tools. They also constitute a large percentage of the manufacturing capacity of iron working tools in Canada.

The intention of the Company is to perfect the organization of the different factories upon a uniform basis, thereby eliminating the excessive duplication of special machinery, etc., which has taken place in the past.

Security Back of Bonds

The reproductive value of the plants, as determined by the Canadian American Appraisal Company is $1,027,973.33, over two and a half times the present bond issue of the Company. The bonds are being issued under a deed of trust and mortgage by the Company to the Montreal Trust Company, of Montreal, and are secured by a fixed and specific first mortgage and charge upon all present and future real and immovable property of the Company.

The total amount of bonds to be issued is limited to $1,000,000, and can only be issued up to 66 2/3 per cent. of the appraised value of the fixed assets. Of this sum $400,000 has been issued and is now being issued. The remaining $600,000 can only be issued to an amount equal to 66 2/3 per cent. of expenditures on capital account subsequent to August 1st, 1910.

On or before the 1st of August, 1914, and annually thereafter, a cash sinking fund of 2 per cent. of all bonds outstanding is to be paid to the Trustees, and used to purchase and retire these bonds at not exceeding 110 per cent. and accrued interest, or to call bonds at that price if not so purchasable. All bonds so purchased shall be the property of the Trustee, and the coupons shall be collected by the Trustee and carried at the credit of the Sinking Fund.

Earnings and Advantage of Consolidation

It is conservatively estimated that the net earnings of the Company for the ensuing year, based on present output, will be $120,000, showing the bond interest earned five times over. These earnings will be materially increased during the following years. The auditors' reports of the various factories have not as yet been completed, but the audit of one of the principal companies shows average net earnings for the years 1900 to 1910 of far more than the amount required to pay the interest on the entire issue of $400,000 Bonds. Mr. George D. Forbes, the President of the Company, in a report, says the benefits to be accrued from the consolidation may be summarized as follows:

Increased efficiency, resulting in economy by specializing the output at the different factories and by eliminating the unnecessary duplication both in output and patterns.

Savings to be effected in the purchase of raw material and in administration. Economies in selling, distributing, manufacturing, and transportation charges.

The consolidation is being effected just at a time when the industry is showing tremendous development, and the new Company, by placing the different factories on a uniform basis, will be in a position to take full advantage of it.

STRONG FINANCIAL POSITION

The different companies are being taken over free from all floating liabilities, and the New Company will have ample working capital.

The Deed of Trust and all legal matters relating to this issue have been approved by Messrs Bicknell, Bain, Strathy & MacKelcan, of Toronto.

Negotiable 6 per cent. Interim Receipts issued by the Montreal Trust Company, Trustee, will be given pending delivery of definite bonds.

A FIRE VISITS COCHRANE MISERABLE WITH DYSPEPSIA

Nineteen Business Places Destroyed--The Loss Will Be $150,000.

A despatch from North Bay, says: Cochrane, 252 miles north of this place, the youngest town in the north and little more than a year old, but a lusty, young community, whose rapid growth has been a marvel, received its first setback on Sunday, when fire licked up nineteen business places. As the merchants occupied living rooms above their stores, nineteen families are homeless, and tents are being hurried to the scene from Cobalt to house the unfortunate until other arrangements can be made. Shortly after 2 o'clock, railwaymen noticed a blaze in Bradley's real estate office, and the alarm was at once given by the blowing of engine whistles and by running from house to house to arouse the sleeping occupants. Fortunately there was no wind blowing or the entire town would have been fire-swept.

As it was, the flames spread with great rapidity, leaping from one frame building to another, and the efforts of the bucket brigade were directed to keeping the fire confined to one side of the street. The entire block facing upon two streets was wiped out, nineteen buildings being completely destroyed. Efforts were made to save the stocks, and merchandise was piled in heaps in the middle of the streets, and much that escaped the flames was damaged by mud and handling. Only one house is left standing in the two blocks devastated, and the sprightly little town presents a sorry appearance with the big black gash across the centre and goods scattered promiscuously in the streets. The locomotives of the T. & N. O. Railway, Foley Bros. and Fauquier Bros., contractors, were pressed into service and supplied water for the bucket brigades. The fire broke out at 2 o'clock in the morning, and burned fiercely until 6 o'clock, when everything in its path had been licked up and the flames gave up for lack of fuel. The homeless ones are being looked after at the King George and Cochrane Hotels for meals, but the sleeping question is a puzzle.

CRIPPEN HAS NOT CONFESSED

Tells Pressman He Will Say Nothing Till He Gets to England.

A despatch from Quebec says: Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard will neither deny nor confirm the report widely published that Dr. Crippen has confessed to the murder of Belle Elmore. To pressmen who called on Wednesday evening at the St. George, where he has apartments, the inspector sent an attendant with a message that he would not be seen. A note was sent up to him asking for a statement, and the word came back, "I have no comment to make."

At the Quebec jail, where Crippen is confined, a newspaper correspondent was told by Governor Morin that he was not aware of any confession, and he entirely discredits the report. No persons, excepting officials, are being allowed in to see Crippen, but a reporter was allowed to send a note to him, asking whether he had anything to say to the press. The reply was, "I will say nothing, till I get to England."

"He always seems cheerful enough," commented Governor Morin, referring to Crippen. The little doctor's contented demeanor is taken to indicate that he has a card still up his sleeve, which he will play at the proper time.

The Scotland Yard man went shopping on Wednesday, and purchased new wearing apparel for Dr. Crippen and Ethel Leneve. The clothing was purchased with the $10 found on the doctor, and a small amount found in the possession of the woman, when they were arrested.

The girl, who is charged jointly with Crippen with the murder of his former wife, is rapidly recovering, and now spends much time walking about her ward in the jail infirmary.

Appeals to the sheriff for passes to visit the jail are pouring in, and the attendance numbers about 300 a day, mostly women. They all want to see Crippen, not the jail, says Governor Morin.

The jewelry, including four diamond rings, found on Crippen, which has been identified as the property of the missing woman, has been turned over to Deputy Sheriff Begin for safe keeping.

Another Wonderful Cure By That Wonderful Fruit Medicine "Fruit-a-tives."

Mr. Mathias Dery, of 225 Church street, Ottawa, Ont., was treated for years by physicians for Painful Dyspepsia. He spent so much money for doctor's medicines without getting much relief that he had about made up his mind that his case was hopeless.

Seeing "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, however, Mr. Dery thought he would invest $50 in a box of these wonderful fruit juice tablets.

And this famous fruit medicine did for Mr. Dery what all the doctors could not do—it cured him.

He writes:—"Fruit-a-tives" positively cured me of severe Dyspepsia when physicians failed to relieve me."

WILD HORSES ROUNDED UP.

Hundred and Eighty Taken in Maple Creek District.

A despatch from Maple Creek, Alta., says: A big band of wild horses, running in the country between the North and South Saskatchewan Rivers, have been rounded up by a picked band of horsemen, and are now being examined for disease at the orders of Dr. Gallivan, Dominion Veterinarian. The roundup took two months and 180 horses were captured by the simple method of keeping them always on the move in a circle with relays of trained horses until they were tired out. The leaders were shot as they were rounded up and the capture of the others in small bands was then easy.

BLACK HAND IN WINNIPEG.

Witness Tells That He Was Threatened With Death.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The Black Hand case in which six Italians were arrested last week is dragging slowly in the Police Court, the most sensational evidence being that of Pasquale Devonna of Lac du Bonnet, who said he had been approached by Antonio Borgogno and invited to join the society, and told that he might be called on to kill, steal or do anything else ordered. The initiation fee was $10, and Devonna was threatened with death if he did not join. He paid $10, but balked when asked for more. He claims he attended a meeting of the society in Winnipeg.

THE C.P.R. SUPPORTS 40,000

Montreal Census Shows 11,092 Employees of the Company Living There.

A despatch from Montreal says: The Canadian Pacific Railway has just completed a census of its employees resident in Montreal. The total number of the company's employees in Montreal is 11,092. A large number of these are unmarried, and so the usual census calculation of five people per family would be excessive, but a fair average of those dependent upon each wage-earner would probably be in the neighborhood of three, making the total number of persons dependent upon the C. P. R. pay-rolls between 30,000 and 35,000. On the usual basis of calculation, about seven thousand people—butchers, bakers, shopkeepers, physicians, teachers, etc.—make a living by attending to the wants of these people, so that it may fairly be computed that upwards of 40,000 people live in Montreal because of the Canadian Pacific's existence.

It is estimated that the average earning per head of those employed is in the neighborhood of $3 per day, making the daily distribution $33,000, or at the rate of about $12,000,000 per year.

ELECTRICITY KILLS THREE

Gang of Men Were Working in Concrete Pipe at the Falls.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says: Albert Collett and George Bruce of this city and Patrick McLaughlin of Niagara Falls, N. Y., were electrocuted while at work in the new concrete pipe line of the Ontario Power Company late on Wednesday afternoon. Together with a score of other workmen, the three victims of the accident were engaged in removing the iron forms used to brace the walls of the reinforced concrete pipe when under construction. A form about three hundred feet from the lower end of the pipe was being removed when it came in contact with the electric wires running through the pipe to supply the incandescent lights. A small portion of the insulation was torn off, the men removing the brace being hurled away as though shot from a gatling gun. Half a score received a shock, and three were killed. There was only a voltage of 110 passing through the wires, but the damp concrete of the pipe in which the men were standing made the shock sufficient to cause death.

This is the only case on record here that so many men have been killed in a single accident by such a low voltage. For a time after the accident it was thought that the three men could be brought to consciousness. Three physicians worked for some time endeavoring to bring the men round and every treatment known to medical science was used, but to no effect. The men were evidently instantly killed.

FIFTY SMALLPOX CASES

Brantford Hospital Filled, and Many Cases Quarantined at Home.

A despatch from Brantford says: Brantford health authorities are asking the city council to take stringent action here in connection with the smallpox outbreak. There are at present fifty known cases, and the doctors are expecting the number to be considerably increased. An entire family of six was removed from Greenwich street on Wednesday, and the outbreak seems to be centered in Eagle Place, the heart of the factory district. The smallpox hospital is filled to capacity and many cases are guaranteed at home. Thus far the city council has refused to order a general vaccination, and the health board are threatening to take matters in their own hands. The school boards have been notified to have every child vaccinated before school reopens in September.

At first the cases reported were of a mild type, and were even diagnosed as chicken pox, but recent cases have been of a pronounced type, and with cold weather it is feared the disease would become violent. The city is asking the county to join in erecting a large and well-appointed hospital.

A despatch from Toronto says: Reports received by Chairman J. L. Englehart, of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway Commission, state that the crops around Liskeard are in splendid condition. Hay is going to average three to four tons to the acre, and the farmers are very happy. They are going to be better off this year than since the district was first settled, and think nothing can prevent them from getting all their hay harvested. Five hay balers are now in the district. At Charlton there are a number of new settlers, including several well-to-do English families. The grain crops, vegetables and hay are all looking remarkably well, especially the hay.

LARGE LIMONITE BODY.

Discovered in Metagami District
It is Quite Promising.

A despatch from Toronto says: Professor Baker, of the Geological Department, has returned from Matagami River, where he was examining the lignite and iron ore areas. Reports from that district are to the effect that the ore bodies of limonite owned by the First Shields people show a body 1,500 feet long and 35 feet of known depth, and, naturally, it may be much larger. Mr. W. J. Baulby, of the T. & N. O., says it is quite as promising as the Helen mine in the early days, when the same amount of stripping had been done.

ANOTHER STRIKE SETTLED.

Canadian Northern Grants Pipefitters an Increase.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: It was announced on Thursday morning that the Canadian Northern has reached an agreement with the striking pipe-fitters, granting them an all-round increase of four cents an hour, from 32½ to 36½, which is practically what the men would have been willing to accept when they made the first demands. The strike of carmen, of whom between 550 and 600 are still said to be out, is proceeding with apparently no change. The men state that the company refuses to deal with them as a union.

CURE FOR LEPROSY.

Doctors Succeed in Isolating Germs of the Disease.

A despatch from Honolulu says: Doctors Brinkeroff and Curry and M. T. Hallman, of Honolulu, have succeeded in isolating the germs of leprosy. This means the ultimate discovery of a cure for the dread disease, long regarded as incurable. The doctors are now attempting to make a toxine from the bacilli and experiments with it at the leper settlement will soon be made.

SETTLERS FROM ABROAD.

Canada Secured 160,000 in First Six Months of 1910.

A despatch from Ottawa says: According to an estimate of the Department of Immigration, the total number of immigrants entering Canada for the first half of the present calendar year was 160,000, of whom about 75,000 entered at Atlantic ports. The balance were practically all American settlers going to the Canadian West.

The newest scarfs of Spanish lace are almost like a mantua.

Taffeta and supple silks in black are favorite fabrics for bathing suit.

Velvet is used to a quite unusual degree in trimming garments and gowns.

Beaded scarfs are prominent, particularly those with gold or steel beads.

Embroidery is used on all belts, collars, and on many of the small articles.

Enamel green is a predominating color among the parasols on beach and boardwalk.

Slippers match the costume, but stockings with them are flesh colored.

Tortoise shell is made up into everything from powder cases to umbrella handles.

Eyeclet embroidery is fashionable in every form this season, and especially on a gown.

The printed chiffon and mouseline scarfs are smart, especially those of Persian design.

An attractive auto coat is made of heavy pongee with the collar of rose colored silk.

The material most in favor for bathing suits is brilliantine, because it does no cling to the figure, nor does it become heavy with water like flannel.

FOR CANADA'S NEW NAVY

Three Canadian Shipbuilding Firms Are Anxious to Tender.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Naval Department reports that, so far, three Canadian shipbuilding firms and two British firms have sent in applications to be allowed to tender on the new ships for the Canadian navy. The plans are not yet quite ready for inspection, as the Admiralty are now working on plans for an improved Bristol, and these improvements will be incorporated in the new Canadian cruisers.

The final specifications of construction will probably be submitted for consideration of the shipbuilding firms in October or November next, and active construction will be begun next year by the successful tenderers. It is stated that there may be a combination of Canadian and British shipbuilding interests effected to undertake the construction of the new war vessels. The cruiser Rainbow will leave Portsmouth for Esquimalt on August 20. It will take about two and a half months to make the voyage. The Niobe will sail for Halifax about the middle of September.

THE FINANCES OF CANADA

Revenue for the First Four Months of the Fiscal Year.

The excess of receipts over the total expenditure has been present fiscal year Canada's revenue shows an increase of $5,625, $7,804,025. Indications point to a surplus this year of revenue over of last year. For the same period all ordinary expenditure even larger than last year's record surplus increased by $1,254,651, while the capital expenditure decreased by $22,000,000. For the month of July the revenue totalled $9,320, $631,884, leaving a net betterment of over five millions.

For the four months the total revenue has been $5,565,439, the customs receipts totalling $23,005, 748, or $5,087,918 better than last year. The expenditure on the consolidated fund account has been finding of gold in the bed of a creek about seventeen miles north of that point. The creek flows out of the Pas Mountains. The deposit resembles that of the Homestake mine in North Dakota, and is very easy to work. The mineral has been found in paying quantities.

YOUNG

WHAT THE FOX THOUGHT.

Nat had a very exciting story to tell to Ned—all about how he had been down in the lower field and had seen a fox, and how the fox had cantered off and disappeared in the ground.

"I found the hole," said Nat, eagerly, "an' we'll get the hired man to go with us to-night and dig out the little ones!" It's just time now for the little foxes to be in the nests, Mr. Cummings says."

The boys' father had told them of a little tame fox he used to have when he was a boy, and ever since Nat and Ned had been wild to get a baby fox to "bring up."

Jackson, the hired man, agreed to go with them that evening when his work was done, and seven o'clock found them at the hole in the field. None of them saw a pair of sharp eyes watching from the bushes.

It was hard work digging in the stony soil, and, dear me! when they got to the end of the little tunnel in the ground there was a great disappointment in store for Nat and Ned—they were no foxes there!

The owner of the sharp eyes stole softly away, and if she had any thoughts upon the subject, and I'm quite sure she did, this is what they were: "What stupid folks to go to all that trouble without finding out beforehand something about the habits of foxes!" Then they would have known that we always take our babies and scamper off to hole number two as soon as we find that somebody has discovered hole number one. That is our protection."

Very Sudden Death.

On Sunday morning Mr. Arthur Downey passed away at his residence on Church street, Belleville, after a serious illness of two days' duration. On Friday morning he was seized on Front street with acute uremia, and had to be conveyed to his home. From the first, the physicians in attendance held out no hopes for his recovery. The late Mr. Downey was in his 71st year and had resided for the greater part of his life in Belleville. He played a prominent part in the social and mercantile life of that city, where he was associated formerly in the grain and latterly in the coal business with his brother, Mr. John Downey, who survives. He was a member of Belleville Lodge A. F. & A. M. and a strong churchman, being a regular communicant of Christ Church at the time of his death. A widow but no family, is left to mourn his loss. Messrs. J. H. Downey, Whitby; John Downey, Belleville and Geo. Downey, Kingston, are brothers. The funeral took place on Tuesday to the family plot in Riverside Cemetery, Napanee.

his death was learned with sincere regret. Mr. Benjamin had been very ill for many days, and for the past few days had been unable to eat, and the end was looked for. The late Mr. Benjamin was about seventy-five years of age, and had been engaged in business at his factory, in Yarker for over forty years. Up till a couple of months ago, Mr. Benjamin was in good health. He had enjoyed comparatively good health, all his life. He suffered a paralytic stroke, and never fully recovered from this. He is survived by two sons, Felix and A. W. both engaged in the factory business and one adopted daughter, Mrs. Dr. Oldham, of Yarker. Mrs. Benjamin died some years ago. The funeral took place at Yarker, on Wednesday afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock.

A Sad Affair.

As the result of having eaten what is supposed to have been toadstools two little girls, Cecilia May Kingsbury aged three, and sister, Ruth Kingsbury aged fifteen months, daughters of Raymond H. Kingsbury, are dead at Rochester, N. Y. The sad news of the tragedy was received in Napanee on Monday. The children's grandmother Mrs. Hannah Kingsbury, is also in a dangerous condition as a result of eating what is believed to have been toadstools and a report from Rochester states that it is feared that she might not recover. The supposed mushrooms were eaten on Saturday morning, but the children were not taken sick until Sunday afternoon. They died on Sunday evening after suffering great agony. The grandmother has been kept in ignorance of the death of the two children, as it is feared that her condition will be greatly aggravated if she knew it. Many friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. Kingsbury in Napanee are sorely grieved at the sad fatality. Mr. Kingsbury is a son of Mr. John Kingsbury and recently started a barber shop on Dundas street which is now being conducted by C. Ford.

The Steamer Quinte Queen will leave Napanee at 1 p.m. on Saturday instead of 1:30 p.m. as usual.

To The Public

On July 5th, through some cause unknown to me, my barn took fire and 65 loads of hay, a quantity of grain and implements, contained therein, were totally destroyed. I was insured in the Lennox and Addington Fire Insurance Co. and I want to hereby publicly express to the Directors and members of our Farmers Home Company my sincere gratitude for the fairness and promptness with which my claim was settled. Drowned near Picton.

A sad drowning accident occurred on Thursday of last week near Picton in which E. J. Paradis, general manager of the Syracuse Gas Engine company,

THE FIRE LADDIES.

Do the citizens ever stop to think, That oft, at the midnight hour, When the fire alarm is sounded From that weather beaten tower, The firemen don their rubber suits, Through dirt and slush to wade; So instead of jeers and sneering, Speak kindly of the fire brigade.

Imagine a night in December, With the mercury twenty below; You lay in your bed so contented, But the firemen they have to go And get soaked to the skin with water; Like mailed warriors, they're not afraid, For our sake to face that furnace, So lift your hats to the fire brigade.

Their lives are hanging in the balance, They never count the cost, Through smoke and flames they fight [their way], And many a man they have lost; All for our sake he risks his life, For his service, he is poorly paid; Your donations go to make a show, You never think of the fire brigade.

An alarm of fire is sounded, In the poor quarter of the town, Where humanity is crowded, For a flat is bursting down; And streaming from the door ways, Half dressed Adults, child and maid, It is not our homes, we need not care, It's a job for the fire brigade.

Hark, listen did you hear, That scream of terror wild, Six stories up in a wreath of flame, Stands a mother and her child; But up a slender ladder, a trip Through Hades is made, For heroism and self sacrifice Call out the fire brigade.

And with his double burden, The ladder bends and sways, He passes through the jaws of death, But that mother and child he saves: Soon the town council table Wreaths and bouquets are laid, For they will get the honor Jeers will do for the fire brigade.

Bouquets for our valiant fire men, Dressed in uniform so bright, They won the cup at Trenton, And brought home the lily white, The town council should encourage them And a banquet should be made, In honor of our fire men For we have the fire brigade.

Two hundred yards they made a dash, And laid two hundred feet of hose, Then from the crowd of spectators A deafening cheer arose; They beat all comers in that test, In forty seconds the time was made, Three cheers for the boys of Napanee Hurrah! for our fire brigade.

A Fine Excursion.

The Oddfellow's Excursion to Toronto and Niagara Falls on Wednesday proved one of the most enjoyable of the many excursions run by Napanee Lodge No. 86 and this is saying a good deal. Nearly all the excursionists went to Niagara Falls and enjoyed the magnificent scenery and sights to be seen there. The Lodge will probably run the same trip next year and with a few of the details perfected should prove even more enjoyable than this year.

Brisco Opera House.

"Ita" is not by any means the whole show, which will begin a week's engagement at the Brisco Opera House on Monday evening next. She certainly is the main attraction, but is supported by an excellent company. The Musical Harringtons are two of the best in the business, and fill the programme to the satisfaction of the public. The show is one of those that advertises itself, that is if you see it you are satisfied and by telling your friends they go and are likewise satisfied. Prices 10, 20 and 30c. See ad. on page one.

Drowned near Picton.

A sad drowning accident occurred on Thursday of last week near Picton in which E. J. Paradis, general manager of the Syracuse Gas Engine company, Syracuse, N. Y., lost his life. Mr. Paradis, with his wife and Capt. Wessels, and H. W. Sheriff, manager of the Royal hotel, were out in Mr. Sheriff's motor boat. There was a heavy sea running. Paradis stood up in the boat and losing his balance, fell overboard, and before he could be reached sank out of sight. Mr. Paradis' body was found in the bay on Wednesday, by Dr. Harold Ward near his father's camp. Mr. Ward at once notified Coroner Dr. Cowan and Chief Graham, who in time informed the Picton authorities. Messrs. Wessels and Sheriff immediately went to Dr. Ward's camp and identified the remains and on permission of the coroner conveyed them to Picton. When found all the unfortunate man's jewellery were still on the body the watch had stopped at 4:10.

Famous Old Property Revived and Improved.

The coal docks, known of late as the Bartlett yard, and formerly operated by the Downey Co., have taken on the appearance of again having fallen into the hands of a progressive business man. The office building on the corner of Water and Centre streets, has been newly painted and thoroughly overhauled and refitted in a handsome office, and the whole street has a much improved appearance in consequence. The big coal scale and scale house has been made as good as new, and a new driveway about completed, making it one of the most complete and up-to-date plants for the handling of coal. The Schooner, Winnie Wing, owned by our townsmen, Mr. R. B. Shipman, is now on her way to Oswego for a cargo of Scranton coal for Mr. Gleeson, and he will be open for business in a few days, with a stock of the same coal that has been handled in that yard, and which always gave satisfaction to its patrons. Mr. Gleeson has a thorough knowledge of the business and we predict for, and wish him the success he deserved in his business venture.

In our last issue we announced the appearance of Ita and Co. at the opera house, Napanee, on August 11th, 12th and 13th. The date has been changed and the company will appear at Napanee the entire week, commencing August 15th. Watch for notice next week.
